2 Transports China-Bound To Evacuate Americans

1250 More Marines Will Reinforce Garrison of 3600 Now at Tsingtao

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Two transports and 1250 additional Marines have been ordered to evacuate American civilians, Defense Secretary Forrestal said yesterday.

The Marines, Forrestal explained, would reinforce the 3600 now serving as a garrison at Tsingtao. He said they would "provide necessary assistance in case of evacuation of our nationals."

Shortly afterward, the Navy Department said in an official statement that "it is expected that in the near future United States nationals from Tsingtao and interior China will be evacuated."

Forrestal said he believed the two transports were on their way to China and that "one is going in tomorrow and one Friday." The Navy Department said both ships were now on their way to Shanghai.

They were described as the Navy transport Gen. H. W. Butner with a passenger capacity above 5000, and the converted destroyer Gosselin. The Gosselin, the Navy said, was on its way from Tsingtao to Shanghai and the Butner was due in Shanghai Friday.

The 1250 Marines were scheduled to leave Guam about November 23 aboard the transport Bayfield for Tsingtao. The Bayfield has a capacity of 1500 persons.

Declines Comment on Fight

Asked if the additional Marines would fight if Communist forces overran Tsingtao, Forrestal declined to comment. Then he added that "their purpose is to aid in whatever steps are necessary for evacuation."

The Cabinet officer thus made it clear that the move did not represent increased aid to the Nationalist government of Chiang Kai-shek, but was concerned entirely with protecting American lives and property.

At the same time it was learned that Chiang had appealed directly and personally to President Truman for a statement of policy which would raise the morale of anti-Communist China. Chiang wrote to Mr. Truman, it was learned, asking for a message of encouragement to the Nationalist forces.

Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett told a news conference a personal letter from Chiang had been received by the President. He declined, however, to reveal its contents and said it was up to Mr. Truman to give details.

Port of Embarkation

Should it become necessary to evacuate American civilians from China, Tsingtao would be the port of embarkation. State Department records indicate 4624 Americans are in the combat zone in China or in the path of the Red armies.

In addition to the Marine garrison at Tsingtao, the 12 ships of the Navy's Task Force 38 are there on a training cruise. These vessels include two carriers, two light cruisers and eight destroyers.

Forrestal, who has just returned from a brief visit to Europe, told a news conference he had not had an opportunity for a detailed survey of the situation there. But he said he had gained these five "impressions":

1. Away from Washington, evidence of unification of the armed

Crusade In Europe

Eisenhower Opposed Zonal Plan Of Postwar Occupation of Reich

By Dwight D. Eisenhower

XII

The President and his group of advisers went on to Tehran from Cairo, but I returned to my own theater. Forward headquarters were then in the process of moving to Caserta, a castle near Naples. Plans were going ahead rapidly for moving the entire main headquarters to that location, a change that I felt necessary.

An immediate visit along the entire battle front convinced me again of the soundness of our view that winter operations in Italy would be accompanied by the utmost hardship and difficulty, especially as they would be undertaken without the constant support of our great asset, an overwhelming air force. I felt that maintenance of morale would require careful control of operations and the best efforts of all commanders. Certainly I intended to be close by to help.

Carefully planned minor offensives, with success assured in each, comprised the campaign I expected to use during the winter; it was dictated by the objective and by the need to sustain morale amidst the inescapably miserable conditions of the Italian mountains.

With the coming of autumn, wretched weather had overtaken us. American soldiers frequently referred in terms of sarcastic disgust to "sunny Italy." With railroads wrecked, bridges destroyed, and many sections of roads blown out, the advance was difficult enough even without opposition from the enemy.

Terrain Difficult, Ideal for Defense

The country itself was ideal for defensive fighting. The terrain was cut up by rivers, large and small, which ran athwart the route of advance. Some of these were so winding that they had to be crossed several times.

The forward route of the Thirty-fourth Division took it across the Volturno three times. One night the assistant commander, Brig. Gen. B. F. Caffey, was returning from the front with a jeep driver who remarked that he simply could not understand such a "crazy" country. Caffey asked him why he felt that way about Italy? The soldier's reply was a classic: "Why, every durn river in the fool country is named Volturno."

In early December, I received word the President would return to the United States through our area. I went to Tunis to meet him. A few hours before his arrival I received a somewhat garbled radiogram from General Marshall that discussed some administrative details incident to my forthcoming change in assignment.

When he wrote the message General Marshall apparently assumed that I had already received specific information concerning the new assignment through staff channels. But, lacking such information, I was unable to deduce his meaning with certainty. The President arrived in mid-afternoon and was scarcely seated in the automobile when he cleared up the matter with one short sentence. He said, "Well, Ike, you are going to command Overlord."

Because I had to discuss with him, at once, details of his next day's plans, we had no opportunity, at the moment, to talk further about the new assignment, but I did manage to say, "Mr. President, I realize that such an appointment involved difficult decisions. I hope you will not be disappointed."

During his visit the President on several occasions discussed matters in connection with my imminent transfer to London. He said that, with the full concurrence of General Marshall, he had designated me to command Overlord because he felt that the time element permitted no further delay in naming a commander. He said also that he had originally planned to give that command to General Marshall, observing that senior officers might well rotate in sharing the burdens and honors of staff and command duty.

Marshall Needed In Washington Spot

However, after consideration he had decided that Marshall could not be spared from Washington and particularly from his post on the Combined Chiefs of Staff. The

Ruhr Plant Return Hit By De Gaulle

General Would Give Up U. S. Aid Rather Than Let Germans Get Industries Back

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Nov. 17 (NYHT).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, in a press conference today, said it would be better for France to do without Marshall Plan aid than to approve German ownership of the powerful industries of the Ruhr.

He denounced a recent Anglo-American decision which provides for German ownership of Ruhr industry and accused the United States and Britain of trying to create a new German Reich. The French government, he declared, should not accept it.

"I am told," he said, "that refusal might threaten the Marshall Plan. Perhaps. We have lived many centuries without the Marshall Plan. I, naturally, am not going to oppose its implementation. I acclaimed it when it was offered to us and I believe it can be of immense use to Europe and France.

Sees Reich Welded to Soviets

"But on one condition: that is that, for temporary things, it does not make us sacrifice the whole future of this country and of Europe."

De Gaulle said there was little doubt in his mind that a future German Reich would turn its back on the West some day and embrace the Soviet Union. On that day, he said, it would not be easy to find another man to do what he did when he rallied Free French forces in London.

In his opinion there was only one solution to the German problem—a federation of German states within a European union and not a European union based on a federation of German states.

He was making his first commentary on French internal and foreign affairs since his Rally of the French People polled something more than 40 per cent of the votes 10 days ago in an indirect election for the Council of the Republic, the advisory house of the French Parliament.

In this commentary he predicted his return to power and demanded again new popular elections for the National Assembly, Parliament's legislative and executive branch.

He also said he would outlaw the Communist Party if it could be proved to be, in fact, an agent of a foreign power.

Cites Bismarck's Policy

As in the past he criticized defensive measures taken by the five western European powers who signed the Brussels alliance. In particular he denied the wisdom of French forces being put under the command of an Englishman, Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery.

De Gaulle would have the world divided into three distinct "theaters of operation." France would take charge of the European and North African theater, Britain of the Middle Eastern and East African theater and the United States of the Far Eastern theater.

In wartime the three theaters would be coordinated by a committee consisting of the chiefs of state of the major powers.

"It is inadmissible," he said, "that French national defense, direction of the French military effort, should be assured by any one other than a Frenchman."

It was the Ruhr question and the alleged creation of a German Reich, however, which bothered him most.

Myers Slated to Be Whip

New Dealers Picked to Push Truman Program in Senate

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A New Deal leadership slate, to direct the Senate drive for the President's full program, yesterday was virtually completed, with the apparent approval of Mr. Truman himself.

Myers

Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.), who as resolutions chairman spelled out the Truman program in the Democratic platform, is slated to be Senate Democratic whip, it was learned.

Subject to Democratic caucus approval, this rounds out an Administration leadership ticket topped by Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) for floor leader.

Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.), just back from a "vacation" with the President at Key West, Fla., lunched yesterday with Lucas and Myers in what those present termed a "strictly social" get-together.

The present Senate majority leader, who after January 20 will step up to the Senate rostrum, later predicted in a press conference that some civil rights will clear the next Congress and reiterated his advocacy of an "effective" cloture rule.

Barkley parried most questions on "programming," however, saying he and the President just "vacated" at Key West.

Would repeal or revision of the Taft-Hartley Act be the first order of business, as Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin has suggested?

Barkley said he didn't know—that it depended on what bills are offered and how fast the committees work. But he left the clear impression it will be near the top of the list.

Would some "compromise" civil rights legislation be passed?

Barkley said he didn't like the word "compromise"—that it implied something vital given up. In a sense, he said, all legislation has some elements of compromise.

Did he think Congress would enact some civil rights legislation?

"I would think so," Barkley replied.

Marshall Plan Officials Estimate 140,000 Tons of Supplies Tied Up

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—A top-notch Federal mediator went to work today on a settlement of the East Coast dock workers' walkout, and tonight announced he had arranged a union-employer meeting Friday.

It will be the first joint meeting since the start of the strike.

The negotiator, William N. Margolis, assistant to the director of the United States Mediation Service, made the announcement after conferring with officials of both sides.

Margolis said that "we haven't gone into great detail on the issues" but that talks for "further exploration" would be held Thursday.

Full Meeting Expected

The entire 125-man union negotiating committee is expected to attend the joint session Friday, while the employers' full 25-man committee will be present.

Margolis said after his arrival from Washington today that he was "neither optimistic nor pessimistic" about a quick settlement.

Serious economic effects of the walkout of 65,000 AFL longshoremen continued to pile up. Additional railroad, steamship line and trucking company employes were laid off.

Marshall Plan officials estimated that 140,000 tons of European recovery supplies are backed up in East Coast ports. And the total is growing at the rate of 20,000 tons a day.

The shipping jam was relieved somewhat, particularly with respect to passengers, by a decision during the day of Canadian longshoremen to handle any vessel which puts in at Halifax.

The Halifax dock workers at first worked diverted vessels after the strike began last Wednesday, then announced they would not touch such ships.

The Cunard White Star line immediately announced the Queen Elizabeth, world's largest passenger liner, would sail from Southampton November 20 and reach Halifax November 24. Its trip had been canceled previously.

The Aquitania arrived at Halifax today, sixth liner to dock there since the strike began. Passenger trains have been shuttling between the Canadian city and New York to handle the passengers.

First Settlement Repudiated

Margolis said "we settled this case once, November 9, and it blew up. Now we've got to go out and settle it again."

He referred to an agreement approved by employers and ILA leaders calling for boosts of 10 and 15 cents an hour in basic dock workers' wage rates. This settlement later was repudiated in a vote of the ILA membership.

The custom house in New York said the number of ships strikebound here had jumped to 123.

The Swedish-American liner Stockholm sailed during the day but took back with her to Goeteborg 400 tons of cargo which could not be unloaded. Passengers handled their own baggage and company officials cast off the ship's lines.

The Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Erie, New York Central and Lackawanna railroads announced additional layoffs of employes who work with export-import cargo. More than 3100 railroad workers now are idle.

An official of the Motor Carrier Association of New York said 2000 trucking employes were out of work temporarily because of the strike. The AFL teamsters Union set the figure at 3500.

In addition, hundred of employes of steamship lines and other shipping concerns were furloughed.

West Firm As Evatt, Lie Renew Plea

Meanwhile Bramuglio Works Behind Scenes Drafting 'Fluid' Plan

Paris, Nov. 17 (AP).—United Nations Leaders Herbert V. Evatt and Trygve Lie renewed their appeal for Berlin peace today after the Western powers refused once again to negotiate with Russia until the blockade is lifted.

The Western power viewpoint was set forth in three separate notes handed to the Assembly president and secretary-general by the United States, Britain and France this afternoon.

These notes, replying to last Saturday's appeal by Lie and Evatt for four-power Berlin peace talks, said the Berlin situation is still a threat to peace and must remain in the hands of the Security Council under present circumstances.

The new Lie-Evatt plea carries a significant shift in emphasis. In the original appeal the stress was placed on possible four-power talks; in today's appeal the two leaders urged the big powers to note "in particular" the part of the earlier Lie-Evatt letter calling on them to "lend their full and active support to the efforts at mediation of the Berlin dispute by the president of the Security Council."

One "neutral" source said the new Lie-Evatt statement apparently indicated the two leaders had accepted the Western view that the Berlin conflict should remain in the Security Council.

In any event, it seemed obvious that the appeal to cooperate with Council President Juan Atilio Bramuglia was directed at Russia, since each of the three Western powers in their replies to Lie and Evatt specifically pledged cooperation with Bramuglia.

A U. N. source said Lie and Evatt expected no formal answer to their latest appeal.

In the past Russia has taken the position that the Berlin dispute should be settled by the Council of Foreign Ministers and not by

1 Room Heated 2 Hours a Day

Army Precooking Berliners' Meals to Save on Airlift Coal

Army cooks are cooking the meals for Berlin housewives, Stanley Andrews, food adviser to Gen. Lucius Clay, revealed yesterday.

They are doing it to save coal—not to save the Berlin housewife work.

The Army can furnish only enough coal to heat one room for about two hours a day—for a Berlin family with children below 10 years of age, Andrews said. For only about 20 minutes of that time is the heat sufficient for cooking—or, as Andrews called it, "boiling heat."

To furnish sufficient coal to increase the "boiling heat" period enough for cooking meals, would overburden the airlift, Andrews explained.

Beans are precooked for two hours, Andrews said, and then dehydrated to save weight. The cooked, dehydrated beans, can be shipped in bags. The Berlin housewife first soaks them in water and then can prepare them for eating by heating them. Precooked oatmeal can be made ready for eating in about 50 seconds.

The same process is used with most foods. Herring is smoked to remove oils and water; the heads and tails are removed. Only dried milk is being shipped in. The Army is having difficulty getting sufficient dried milk. The price for American milk is too high. Supplies of milk and butter are bought in Switzerland, Holland, and elsewhere. Some oleomargarine comes from Hamburg—about the only available.

Packing and dehydrating plants have been set up in western Germany to carry on the task of feeding 2½ million persons in Berlin.

Andrews is representing General Clay at the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization Conference here. With him is Dr. Arthur Hanau, director of agricultural research for Bizonia. Hanau succeeded in inducing the Allied governments to abandon a plan for destroying the great German aeronautical research center near Brunswick, in the British zone. It has been changed into an agricultural research center on the "order of the Beltsville Station," Andrews explained.

Price Supports For Potatoes Cut by Third

Price supports for potatoes—the biggest headache in the whole farm price support program—were cut one third by Agriculture Secretary Brannan yesterday.

Potatoes next year will be supported at 60 per cent of parity instead of 90 per cent as at present. Legislation passed at the last session permits Brannan to make the change.

At the same time, Brannan proposed that farmers cut their acreage in potatoes to 1,938,008—about 20 per cent below this year. The department seeks to cut the harvest to about 250 million bushels, as compared with 431 million this year.

"I want it clearly understood that this figure applies to potatoes only, "Brannan said. "It cannot be regarded as a precedent or as the attitude of this department in establishing the general level of price supports under our new legislation."

Only growers who stay within the average goal set for the year will be eligible for price supports, Brannan said.

Potato price supports cost the Government about 90 million dollars in 1946. Last year the cost was about half that. This year it is expected to run above 60 million.

U. S. Suspends CIO Leader Over Loyalty

Dorothy Bailey, a top-ranking member of the CIO's left-wing United Public Workers, has been suspended on grounds of possible disloyalty from her $8000-a-year job with the United States Employment Service.

Miss Bailey has flatly denied the charge, and through her attorney, Milton Freeman of Arnold, Fortas & Porter, has filed an appeal with the Civil Service loyalty review board.

She was suspended from her job as training officer with the USES November 3 after the Civil Service Commission's fourth regional loyalty board ruled "reasonable grounds" existed for believing her disloyal.

Has Right of Appeal

However, on all such rulings the employe has the right of appeal to the loyalty review board.

Miss Bailey is a former member of the international executive board of UPW and a trustee and former president of Local 10 of the union, which embraces employes of the Labor Department and Federal Security Agency. The union has been called Communist-dominated by rightwing CIO officials.

She has figured at national conventions of the UPW, usually as a spokesman for the leftwing faction.

Jurisdictional Change

The Labor Department Loyalty Board began a review of Miss Bailey's case last spring, when USES was still under the Labor Department.

However, USES was transferred to the Federal Security Agency before a decision was reached, so jurisdiction in the case passed to the fourth regional loyalty board.

While the regional loyalty board was studying her case, there were heavy layoffs in USES and she lost her job. However, she was called back to work last summer.

Suppression Of Testimony Laid to Barrett

Accusation Made At ABC Hearing On Mitchell Grill

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

The Alcoholic Beverages Control Board hearing into charges against Mitchell's Grill, 235 G st., nw., yesterday exploded on two fronts:

1. Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, was accused by the cafe's attorney of attempting to suppress testimony.

2. Prosecutor Robert D. Wise recommended that the ABC Board send a transcript of the case to the United States attorney's office for possible perjury action.

Defense Attorney F. Joseph Donohue hurled the charges against Barrett in recalling that Pvt. Samuel E. Wallace, formerly of the vice squad, had testified that Barrett and Lieut. Roy Blick, vice squad chief, told him to avoid "mud slinging" in his testimony.

"Don't you think we should try this case before the major, since he limits testimony?" Donohue exclaimed.

"I've never been a member of the police force, but I have served in the Army, the Navy and the Air Force. I think military discipline is on par with that of the police, but I've never been instructed by a superior nor have I ever told a man under me that when 'you testify under oath to tell the whole truth, for reasons of my own, I don't want you to mention certain aspects . . .'

"The board should be the sole judge of what evidence it should hear and not some outside authority," the attorney declared.

"You can't believe Wallace," Donohue said, "when, under orders from someone other than his own conscience, he decides what part of the truth you are going to hear.

"The witness has taken the stand under oath and has not told the whole truth because there were certain matters he (Barrett) didn't want discussed."

Donohue told the board: "If you

Armistice Day Slaying

Arlington Man, 24, Confesses Salesman's Murder, Police Say

James Nolan, 24, of 1021 N. Taylor st., Arlington, yesterday confessed to the murder and robbery of a well-to-do Arlington salesman near Warrenton, Va., on Armistice Day, police reported.

Arlington County police said he made the confession as they questioned him on a $500 robbery from an Arlington cleaning store on the same day.

The slain man was Belmont Woodridge, about 44, of 803 N. Wayne st., salesman for a funeral supply house.

Arlington Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard said Nolan had confessed shooting Woodridge near Route 620, 5 miles northwest of Warrenton.

According to Arlington and Fauquier County law officers, Nolan yesterday reenacted the murder at the scene, telling how he shot Woodridge six times with a .32-caliber revolver, dragged the body off the road, hid it in leaves, then drove off in the salesman's 1947 Cadillac coupe.

Nolan yesterday was charged with murder by Fauquier County Sheriff Sam Hall and held in jail at Warrenton.

According to Arlington Funeral Director Walter E. Fitzgerald, who said he had known Woodridge well, the two men were driving to Cincinnati, Ohio, when the shooting took place.

Nolan, Fitzgerald said, had promised to buy two $8000 limousines from Woodridge, a salesman for the Sayles & Scoville Co. of Cincinnati, and they were driving to Ohio to close the deal.

Noland was picked up by West Virginia State Police in Romney, W. Va., Monday after Arlington had broadcast a lookout for him in connection with the $500 stolen from the Progresssive Cleaners, 2727 Wilson blvd., Arlington. Noland later confessed to the robbery, police said.

State police said they became susp icious of Nolan when he became "too free with his money" in Romney on Monday.

Checking the Cadillac coupe, police found the .32 revolver, Woodridge's driving license and auto registration card. They also said they found $1900 in war savings bonds Nolan ater confessed he had taken from Woodridge's Arlington apartment after the shooting.

Woodridge, said by Fitzgerald to be single and "well-to-do," had lived in Arlington since about 1936. He was a graduate of Yale University.

Surviving are a sister, Mrs. M. L. Rosenzweig of Columbus, Miss., and her daughter, Betty, a student at Northwestern University.

The 1949 Red Feather drive yesterday hit 68.7 per cent of its $4,566,790 goal with only three days remaining until the scheduled closing of the campaign.

Five units reported at a luncheon session in Hotel Washington.

General Campaign Chairman Chauncey Parker expressed optimism over efforts to date.

"We're within shooting distance of last year's total," he said, and reminded workers that last year's intake took until March 1 to come in. Thus, he said, "we are doing much better moneywise."

But he advised the volunteers not to "slacken your efforts for a moment."

Yesterday's general report, which placed the total contributions to date at $3,137,407.10, showed:

Residential, 733 new gifts for 63.26 per cent of the $482,479 goal; Business I, 1222 new gifts for 63.33 per cent of the $1,785,271 goal; Business II, 193 new gifts for 37.5 per cent of the $364,390 goal; Prince Georges, 640 new gifts, for 44.13 per cent of the $60,323 goal; Alexandria, 163 new gifts for 62.71 per cent of the $74,495 goal.

Another general report luncheon will be held at 12:15 p. m. Friday at Hotel Washington. That is the scheduled closing time of the campaign.

British Agreements on Wheat Assailed by U. S. Before FAO

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A United States spokesman attacked Britain's wheat and other commodity agreements yesterday, bringing a prompt response.

The flareup occurred at the annual conference of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization in the Shoreham Hotel.

Undersecretary of Agriculture Albert J. Loveland criticized the agreements in opening the debate.

United Kingdom and Australian delegates in reply pointed out that their countries had tried to join in a unilateral agreement on world wheat purchases — the International Wheat Agreement—and had been turned down by the United States.

After reviewing this country's contribution of food to avert famine in the world, Loveland declared that "the United States will continue to produce abundantly . . . unless other nations of the world force us to do otherwise.

"Wheat, for example, has been for some years in the forefront of the thinking of many of us present here," he said. "I frankly note with some apprehension the fact that a large portion of the wheat moving in world trade today is already tied up through bilateral agreements or other government-controlled bulk contract sales. And, unfortunately, that practice is widespread with respect to other commodities as well.

"That is not the direction in which my Government wants to move. We feel that it is contrary to the best interests of the

Trygve Lie, Hunter Himself, Is in Middle Of World's Diplomatic Sharpshooting

Trygve Lie, secretary general of the United Nations, has a passion for hunting—moose, grouse, or any fair game. A fine diversion, that, especially since he himself is often the target of great powers' diplomatic sharpshooters.

TRYGVE LIE
Tries for peace . . .

At this moment, the statesmen of the Western powers are in the mood to take after the "first citizen of the world" with their shooting irons. They feel that Lie, together with U. N. Assembly President H. V. Evatt, is helping Russia's game in appealing for a settlement of the Berlin dispute outside the U. N. Security Council.

It was only a month ago that the secretary general was accused by Pravda, Russia's mouthpiece, of taking sides with the Anglo-American bloc on the issues of atomic energy control, bacteriological warfare, Greece, Korea, Palestine, and Indonesia.

The fact that Lie is attacked by both West and East doesn't necessarily make him right, but it does necessarily place him in the middle. Still, after nearly two years in this unenviable spot, the secretary general has managed to retain his post, his sanity, and his good humor. And the diplomats, individually, can't help liking him.

Sometimes Called "Trigger"

Trygve Lie (pronounced Triga Lee, and sometimes called Trigger Lee by his hunting companions) is a big bear of a man, ordinarily good-natured and playful, but sometimes aroused to outbursts of anger.

Despite his hulking figure, the Norwegian-by-birth, world-citizen-by-vocation is light on his feet. He looks and acts as if he were always on the ball. As a matter of fact, though, the 52-year-old U. N. official hates to make quick decisions, and would much prefer to take off for a game of tennis and come up with the decision later.

Lie was leader of the Norwegian delegation to the first session of the United Nations Assembly in 1946 when he was elected secretary general. His name was first proposed for president of the assembly by Russia with the blessing of the United States, but he was beaten by Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, backed by Britain. Then when the Eastern and Western blocs failed to agree on a secretary general, the United States proposed Lie. He was elected overwhelmingly.

The portly secretary general's troubles stem from the nature of his duties. He not only runs the permanent secretariat, made up of a conglomeration of experts from many countries. He has also, under Article 99 of the U. N. Charter, enormous powers, expressed in one sentence:

"The secretary general may bring to the attention of the Security Council any matter which in his opinion may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security."

Gets $20,000 A Year

At first it was charged that the "jolly fat man" was afraid to make use of his authority; then it was charged he was overstepping his authority.

For these responsibilities—and abuse—Lie gets $20,000 a year tax-free, and use of a 14-room house in the Forest Hills section of New York, and the use of a Cadillac.

Trygve's father was a carpenter, who vanished when the boy was 6. The youth was brought up in his mother's boarding house outside Oslo, Norway's capital. He came under the influence of a Socialist school teacher, and by his twenty-sixth year was already legal adviser to the Labor Party.

That was in 1922. For the next 13 years he fought hundreds of labor cases in the courts. Curiously, he first clashed with Quisling, then Defense Minister, in 1931, when the latter called out troops in an effort to smash a strike. When the Labor Party won control of the government in 1935, Lie was named minister of justice. One of his headaches was to give Leon Trotzky asylum, then kick him out.

When the Germans, with the aid of Quisling, invaded Norway in 1940, Lie held out to the bitter end, then joined King Haakon in London. He just managed to get away with his wife and two daughters. A third daughter, trapped in Norway, was smuggled out four years later.

Leading Spirit In Cabinet

Lie became a leading spirit in the cabinet-in-exile, helped turn 1000 Norwegian merchant ships over to the Allied cause. When extreme left-wing sailors tied up 30 Norwegian merchantmen in New York harbor, Lie flew to this country and within a week won the recalcitrants over. Meanwhile, Lie was raised to foreign minister and in that role returned to his liberated country after the war.

Friends sum up Lie's philosophy this way: He believes in improving man's lot on earth without destroying his dignity as a man.

the Security Council. In her reply to the Lie-Evatt note yesterday, Russia made no reference to the Security Council but indicated she would be willing to discuss the Berlin issue either in the Council of Ministers, along with entire German problem or possibly in a meeting of the Big Four chief executives.

Bramuglia, who was reported to have refused to join Lie and Evatt in their appeal last week, has continued to work behind the scenes on what his associates call a new "fluid" formula for ending the Berlin dispute. This is believed to involve some form of gradual lifting of the blockade along with application of a new Soviet-backed mark in Berlin.

Bramuglia talked with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky for nearly an hour today. He was reported to have gone over the new plan with him.

Chinese Get Ready For Shift of Capital

Nanking, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Chinese government leaders are preparing to move the capital to Canton in southern China if the Communists capture Suchow, an authoritative source said today.

But he said he believed new Nationalist victories would enable the government to hold Suchow, 200 miles northwest of the present capital of Nanking.

President Chiang Kai-shek, he stressed, has not considered seriously any plan to evacuate Nanking.

Informed sources believed any such plans await the outcome of the Suchow fighting and appeals for American aid.

On the central fighting front, a report from United Press Correspondent Arthur Goul at Suchow appeared to bear out government claims that the Chinese air force was staging round-the-clock bombing and strafing raids and that a Nationalist counter-offensive had pushed back the Communists 20 miles east of Suchow. Suchow itself was calm and quiet, Goul said.

Government reports said troops, driving south from Suchow and north from Pengpu, about midway between Suchow and Nanking, made "considerable" gains in an effort to reopen the vital Suchow-Nanking railway.

A government spokesman claimed the Communists had suffered "more than 100,000 casualties" and that 8000 Reds were taken prisoner during the week-long battles for Suchow.

On the other hand, the Communist radio said nine government divisions were "wiped out," including the 63d and 107th armies. That could be 90,000 men. Both sides are inclined to exaggerate casualties.

In north China, the Nationalists admitted that strong Communist forces managed to storm into the east and south gates of Paoting, capital of Hopei Province, but they said a counterattack forced back the Reds.

One hundred and five more Americans, mostly wives and children of United States personnel, left Pieping today for Tientsin, where they will board a ship for home. The Peiping-Tientsin railway was operating normally and there was no sign of an immediate Communist offensive against either city.

7 Ask Mercy

MacArthur Final Arbiter Of Hangings

Tokyo, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Gen. Hideki Tojo and his six fellow warlords, sentenced to death by an international military court probably will be hanged next week unless Gen. Douglas MacArthur grants them mercy, a usually reliable informant said today.

MacArthur is to meet with other Allied officials Monday to discuss the sentences of the condemned men and 18 others sent to prison, and their appeals.

As soon as the sentences were announced November 12, MacArthur, the final authority, said he would give the warlords seven days in which to appeal.

Allied sources believe the death sentences will be carried out within four or five days of Monday's meeting, if MacArthur confirms them.

Arabs Demand U. N. Scrap Partition Plan

Paris, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Arab spokesmen demanded today that the United Nations scrap its partition plans for Palestine and forbid the Jews to create a state there. The Arab world can never consent to the existence of a Jewish state in Palestine, they said.

Faris el Khouri of Syria, Ahmed Mohammed Hashaba of Egypt and Abdul Jabar Jorward of Iraq dominated the Political Committee which, after long delay, has begun to debate a permanent settlement of the Holy Land problem.

Neither Britain nor the United States was ready to state its Palestine policy.

In desperation, Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, committee chairman, appealed to other delegates to speak out and then, in disgust, adjourned the committee until Thursday, snapping, "I hope somebody will sit up all night and write a speech." A special night meeting was canceled.

Egypt's Hashaba rejected the partition proposals of the late Count Folke Bernadotte, charging they called for recognition of Israel as a full-fledged state and did not offer "a reasonable solution."

Syria's El Khouri attacked the Jews for insisting on their right to create their own state and challenged the nations that support partition, especially Russia and the United States, to "take the homeless Jews into their territories."

Jorward of Iraq asked the U. N. to "arise against Zionist adventurers and refuse to recognize the Zionist state."

Abdullah Declares More Fighting Useless

Amman, Trans-Jordan, Nov. 17 (NYHT).—King Abdullah said today that further warfare in Palestine would be useless for both Arabs and Jews and that he hoped to see the present "semipeace" supplanted by a "real peace."

"My feeling is," he said "that the Jews should be more reasonable. My advice to Arabs is that they should accept the logical."

Admitting that the Arabs had suffered some setbacks, Abdullah attributed this, in part, to the fact that the Arab peoples had put their trust in the Arab League.

He declared that all Palestinian Arab groups except the Arab Higher Committee had given him full authority to act for them and had asked him to "solve their problem with wisdom as it appears best to us."

services is more apparent than here. Cooperation in the Berlin airlift is an "outstanding" example of unification.

2. The airlift has introduced a "new era" in air transport. No one foresaw its implications in this field when it was begun.

3. The spirit and patience of the British people is astonishing. Despite continued severe controls "I have a vivid impression of their courage and tenacity in adversity."

4. The Western Union as an entity is "beginning to take form and shape."

5. In Gen. Lucius D. Clay and Maj. Gen. Clarence Heubner the country "has representatives of whom it may be proud."

Cost of Airlift

Forrestal said an estimate of 100 million dollars for the cost of operating the airlift for one year was made hastily and might have to be revised substantially upward. The Air Force, he added, was prepared to carry out whatever policy the Government established and funds would be made available as needed.

Asked about probable legislative requests in 1949, Forrestal said Congress would be asked to raise service pay and to continue the present $1500 income tax exemption until it could act on raises. He would not comment on the probable defense budget estimate beyond recalling Mr. Truman's request that it be held below 15 billion dollars. It would be ready for submission to the Budget Bureau November 29, he said.

He expected to recommend some modifications in the present unification law, "not many or very drastic." In connection with interservice squabbles, Forrestal said he had directed that testimony before official or quasi-official bodies be submitted to him beforehand if it contained references to other services.

With Forrestal at the conference was C. D. Howe, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, who said he had been discussing standardization of military equipment. Changing conditions, he said, have made it necessary to standardize with the United States rather than with Great Britain and the first steps probably would be taken in aircraft.

Tree Next to Blair Houses Doomed

The Paulownia tree overlooking the temporary White House, after winning a day's reprieve yesterday, is scheduled to be cut down this morning by workers of the District trees department "for security reasons."

Supt. John W. Batson secured permission from the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, 700 Jackson pl., and the owner of the adjoining tract at 710 Jackson pl., to destroy the tree.

The tree is in an alleyway running alongside the Blair House, which President Truman and his family are scheduled to occupy while the White House is being repaired. A White House official asked District officials to trim it.

All Berliners Told To Get Soviet Cards

Berlin, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—The Russians ordered today that Germans be issued new identity cards December 1 and threatened to isolate completely western Berliners if they hold scheduled elections December 5.

The order, announced by Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, Russian commander in chief in Germany, said all Germans in the eastern zone and in Berlin would be issued Soviet identity cards, but Western allied officials said the old four-power cards would continue to be used in western Berlin.

A high American official said Sokolovsky's order probably was designed to pave the way for the complete separation of eastern Berlin from the rest of the city.

Taegliche Rundschau, official organ of the Soviet military government, warned that western Berlin might be cut off from all land communication with the rest of Germany and that its economy would be "completely disorganized" if German officials go ahead with plans for December 5 balloting.

The newspaper said western Berliners might even be barred from eastern sector hospitals.

It foresaw that subways, elevated trains and streetcars would stop at sector boundaries, that all telephone communications between the western sectors and eastern Germany would be cut, that the Russians would cripple western Berlin's water, gas and electricity production.

Warning bluntly that holding elections would mean a "final split," the paper said the western Berlin government would be deprived of eastern marks, now the city's chief currency.

'Only in Name'

Wiedemann Cleared on Nazi Charge

Passau, Germany, Nov. 17 (A.P.).—A German denazification court today decided Fritz Wiedemann was a former Nazi, but in name only.

Wiedemann

Wiedemann, one-time personal adjutant to Hitler, and later consul-general in San Francisco, was fined 2000 deutschmarks (about $600) after a three-day trial in which only two witnesses appeared against him.

[The United Press said dozens of Jews testified during the trial, describing Wiedemann as their "guardian angel."]

Wiedemann originally was charged with being a major offender, Class 1 of the four categories of Nazis. In today's verdict he was placed in Class 4, which applies to persons who were members of the party without taking active part.

Court President Ludwig Salisco said the evidence showed Wiedemann actually was an opponent of Nazism, even though he held high office under Hitler. Referring to him as a "good spirit in the underground," Salisco said:

"The evidence has shown that in San Francisco Wiedemann committed high treason against the Nazi regime in order to save Germany from complete ruin."

[The FBI reported in November, 1946, that Wiedemann and another man described as a German-American Bund member discussed assassination of King George and Queen Elizabeth of England during their 1939 visit to the United States—Editor's note.]

Wiedemann left San Francisco in 1941 before the United States entered the war against Germany. From San Francisco he went to China as German consul.

Salisco said that in China Wiedemann's "anti-Nazi activity reached its highest peak."

$40,000 Bribe Offered Aide, Witness Says

London, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—The boss of Britain's biggest gambling interest testified in the government's graft investigation today that his competitors had offered a Board of Trade official a $40,000 bribe "to put me out of business."

Harry Sherman, director of "Sherman's Pools," which takes bets on football games, said he was given that information by Sidney Stanley, a central figure in the probe, who was described by an earlier witness as "the biggest villain unhung."

Sherman said Stanley identified the official who was approached as John Belcher, the board's parliamentary secretary.

Earlier in the day, Attorney General Sir Hartley Shawcross called a parade of witnesses to wind up testimony that Stanley was involved, through his friendship with government officials, in a deal to purchase amusement machinery instead of steel from Britain's allocation of dollars in the United States.

Detective Inspector Joseph Kennedy of Scotland Yard's fraud squad testified that when he questioned Attorney Alfred Bieber, who appeared before the tribunal yesterday, the latter had told him:

"I know that Stanley entertains a number of Labor members of Parliament, including Belcher, Glenvil Hall and Key."

William Glenvil Hall is Financial Secretary to the Treasury and Charles Key is Minister of Works.

French Dock Strike Called For Monday

Paris, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—A Nationwide port and dock strike of "unlimited duration," starting Monday, was called tonight by France's Communist-dominated labor unions.

Coming on the heels of the East Coast longshoremen's strike in the United States, the scheduled walkout would seal France off from all Marshall Plan shipments. Several ports, including Bordeaux and Dunkirk, already were crippled by strikes.

The Federation of Port and Dock Workers ordered the walkout after a breakdown in negotiations with Christian Pineau, minister of public works and transport.

Pineau told the dock workers he could not make promises regarding wage increases.

Daughter Is Born To J. H. R. Cromwells

New York, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—A daughter was born today to James H. R. Cromwell, 52, former husband of Doris Duke, and his third wife, the former Mrs. Maxine MacFetridge, 37.

Physicians decided upon an emergency caesarian operation this afternoon because Mrs. Cromwell had developed complications. Both mother and the prematurely born child were reported doing well. The baby, Maxine, weighed 5 pounds, 12 ounces.

Cromwell, former United States Minister to Canada, was married to Mrs. MacFetridge at a quiet ceremony in Washington on April 24 of this year.

The plane was returning to Luebeck in the British zone from a regular airlift flight to Gatow airport.

13-Year Ocean Search Finds No Lost Atlantis

Berkeley, Calif., Nov. 17 (U.P.).—The "lost continent" of Atlantis never existed, a scientist claimed today after 13 years of exploring the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean.

Dr. Maurice Ewing of Columbia University said he has mapped, photographed, probed, sounded and visited the ocean deeps since 1935 and found no evidence of the mysterious continent believed to have sunk in a great cataclysm of prehistoric times.

"There never was such a place," Ewing declared flatly.

He told the National Academy of Sciences he wasn't looking directly for Atlantis, but he took undersea photographs as deep as 18,000 feet and found no buried temples or lost cities.

The Columbia geophysicist said he has found on the ocean bottom vast gullies and canyons, and plains as flat and big as the prairies of the Midwest; vast "submarine rivers" flowing underneath the Atlantic, and mountains towering 10,000 feet above the ocean floor but still a mile below the surface.

The seagoing explorers photographed animals that live in darkness 3 miles down, and took pictures of footprints and tracks left by animals that science thus far has been unable to identify.

However, none of the living monsters photographed were "unknown," Ewing said, and eventually the fossilized footprints should be identified.

Herman Talmadge Is Inaugurated Georgia Governor

Atlanta, Nov. 17 (AP).—Herman Talmadge was inaugurated as Governor today with military pomp.

A National Guard band played "Dixie," an old cannon cracked out a 19-gun salute, planes roared overhead, and his followers, wearing red "Talmadge" buttons, cheered.

Thus did the 35-year-old Talmadge become Georgia's sixty-third Governor and the youngest in the Nation.

For him it was the end of a trail which began with the death of his father, the late Governor-elect Eugene Talmadge.

On the basis of 675 write-in votes the General Assembly nearly two years ago declared Herman Governor to succeed his father.

Forrestal to See Truman on China

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Key West, Fla., Nov. 17.—James V. Forrestal, Secretary of Defense, is flying here tomorrow to talk over the grave Chinese situation with President Truman.

The conference will embrace almost the entire American foreign and defense policies on a world front. Crises are approaching in several areas.

Mr. Truman had talked by long-distance telephone with the Defense Secretary this morning. Forrestal said he wanted to see the President. Mr. Truman invited him to fly down for lunch.

The pressures of critical moments along far-flung lines of American interests slowly were dissipating the atmosphere of vacation around the palm-shaded cottage that is the temporary White House.

On Tuesday, W. Stuart Symington, Secretary of the Air Force, had flown to Key West for another of the luncheon conferences that is breaking up the holiday mood here.

Forrestal has announced that his resignation is in the President's desk and that he won't be in the Cabinet for the next full term. Symington also has been mentione das being in some disfavor. But it was world problems, rather than their personal tenures, that brought them to Florida.

[Asked at a news conference Wednesday about his plans, Forrestal said: "I can sum it up by saying I'm at the service of the President." He added that "it is singularly and peculiarly his business whom he wants in his Cabinet."

[Forrestal said he didn't know whether it was a custom but that he always had submitted a pro forma resignation upon taking office, under both Presidents Roosevelt and Truman. He remarked that he had been in office 8½ years and that four more would make 12½ "and that's a long time."—Editor's Note.]

Almost hourly Robert A. Lovett, Undersecretary of State, has been relaying reports of military and political disaster in North China to Mr. Truman's staff at the naval base here.

And the fact that Chinese Communists are now within an hour's flight of Nanking, the capital of Chiang Kai-shek's government, has confronted the President with a grave problem. It appeared to be on the same level with the Greek crisis which resulted in promulgation of the Truman Doctrine early in 1947.

Forrestal's visit was to enable President Truman to familiarize himself with the facts on China as well as on the state of the North Atlantic diplomatic and military alliance.

But it seemed probable that the President would make no decision on these grave matters until he has conferred with George C. Marshall, Secretary of State, and W. Averell Harriman, roving ECA Ambassador, in Washington on Monday.

Goes to Beach With Margaret

The President today found time, in the increasing press of his political duties, to continue deepening his sun tan. He took along with him to his private beach, tucked away in the ruins of Old Fort Taylor, his daughter, Margaret.

More local color was supplied by Mon C. Wallgren, who has been recovering here with the presidential party from the political wounds of being thrown out of the Governor's chair in Washington State two weeks ago, with a brilliant demonstration of pool shooting for reporters living at bachelor officers' quarters on the submarine base.

Sam Rayburn, next Speaker of the House of Representatives, follows Forrestal to Key West by a few hours. He is due here shortly before nightfall tomorrow by airplane from Bonham, Tex., and when the President concludes his discussion of foreign affairs, he will turn to the composition and strategies of getting his legislative up the announced Senate Republican plan to modify Senate cloture rules to shut off any filibuster against civil rights bills.

Barkley said he has always opposed the filibuster device and has repeatedly advocated changes in the rules to make cloture "effective against filibusters."

But he said he is in no position to say what will be done about it, since he "will not even be a Senator" after January 20.

The Kentucky leader, who will retain his Democratic leadership during the 17-day interval between time Congress meets (January 3) and his and Mr. Truman's inauguration (January 20), predicted no substantial legislation will be passed during that period because of organization and other routine business.

Myers predicted a "large part" of the Truman program will clear Congress and called on Republicans to cooperate on those points that match the GOP platform.

The Pennsylvanian now in line for party whip said the "biggest battle" will come on civil rights because of the Democratic split but told newsmen there is "a splendid opportunity" to enact civil rights legislation.

May Need GOP Help

"It may take some cooperation from the Republicans," he added. "If they follow their own platform, I am confident some civil rights measures will pass."

Lucas said the President had a "mandate from both the Democratic convention and the electorate" and Congress ought to "follow through."

"It does seem to me that with a working majority of the House and Senate, and overwhelming defeat of reactionaries at the polls, a major portion of the program can be passed."

Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), who sat in on the Barkley luncheon, said he agreed the President has "a popular mandate."

Kilgore said he favored outright repeal of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act rather than "repeal by amendment."

Others Indicate Amendment

Other Administration Senators indicated however that Congress may be asked to repeal the law by writing a new Wagner Act amendment "fair alike to labor and management."

Among newcomers to the Senate who favor the latter process was Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa). Gillette said he promised in his campaign to help amend the law "so there will be a balance between labor and employers."

Most of the Republican arrivals at the Capitol were talking softly. Senator Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.), chairman of the Senate Republican conference, said the GOP role can't be forecast until the President lays a specific program before Congress.

Representative Harold Knutson (R., Minn.), defeated for reelection, said he fears the excess profit tax proposed by the Administration, if enacted, will hit business so hard it will bring on a depression.

Britain's Food Agreements Attacked by U. S. at Meeting world, that it is contrary to the goals set forth in the Atlantic charter, that it is contrary to the spirit of the recommendations of FAO's preparatory commission, and the proposed International Trade Organization Charter.

"We feel that the multilateral approach to these commodity problems is infinitely better, and we shall urge that approach at the appropriate place on the agenda."

Reply to Attack

A quick reply to the attack came from J. G. Crawford of Australia, director of the Australian Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

"Australia was disappointed," he said, "that the International Wheat Agreement negotiated last March and ratified by her parliament, was not ratified by a sufficiency of countries to bring it into effect on the date contemplated, August 1, 1948.

"Australia is prepared to participate in negotiations to bring about an agreement effective August 1, 1949."

Loveland had asked "is there a continuing market for the abundance which our farmers can and want to produce? That is what our farmers are asking, and it is the question that I ask you."

Price Stabilization

Thomas Williams, British Minister of Agriculture and Fishiers said "stabilization of agricultural prices with the attendant relief to the agricultural community from the social and economic hazards of violent fluctuations, has rightly become an objective in all advanced countries.

"In my own country our farmers know what the prices of their crops are going to be two years ahead and their floor price for livestock four years ahead.

"In the international sphere we have made long term contracts covering periods from three to even seven years with a number of countries to expand their production.

"We have also taken part in the negotiations for the International Wheat Agreement and are members of the International Sugar Council.

"These actions are examples of international cooperation."

One British delegate, commenting on Loveland's speech, remarked: "It is due for the razzberry."

The proposed International Wheat Agreement was not even considered by the last Congress when placed before it for ratification. It fixed a floor price for wheat for five years—with guaranteed exports of at least 185 million bushels from this country each year.

Great Britain has unilateral agreements with Australia and Canada for wheat exports, and with others for cotton and other products. Others are said to be under discussion.

German Officials Taken to Task by Zone Commander

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—The British commander in Germany accused western German officials today of mishandling food and bungling other governmental problems.

Gen. Sir Brian Robertson, meeting newsmen in Bizonia's capital for the first time, read a 10-page statement blasting German authorities for failing to halt the hoarding of consumer goods, faulty financial administration and slowness in drawing up a provisional constitution for a west German government.

He said food collections in Germany were "not encouraging" and warned that Germans will have a low standard of living for a long time.

Robertson observed there appeared to be excessive slowness in preparing a constitution for western Germany and that, "I must say frankly that I should like to see some faster progress. The issues at stake, both political and economic, are too vital to permit delay."

Pork Smugglers' Gruntless Pigs Found 'Pickled'

Bonn, Germany, Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Customs guards at the Belgian-German border claimed they smashed a pork-smuggling ring today after discovering three "pickled" pigs. It seems, the guards said, that some pigs have been going to market drunk.

Checking more closely, they found three pigs that didn't even flinch when prodded with a spear. Smugglers confessed that the animals had been lulled into insensibility with brandy.

11 Africans Get Death Sentence For Ritual Murder

Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, Nov. 17 (AP).—Two Basutoland chiefs and nine followers were sentenced today to death for a ritual murder.

The doomed chiefs are Bereng Lerothold and Gabashane Amasura. Asked why the death penalty should not be passed on him, Chief Bereng said he held too high a position to resort to ritual murder. He said the sacrifice of human flesh was not needed to increase his eminence.

Basutoland is a British possession. The crown accused the convicted men of conspiring in March to kill a man named Meleke Ntai.

Eisenhower Tells of Last Talk With Ailing Roosevelt

President said that it was Marshall's commanding presence on the Combined Staff that always inspired his own feeling of confidence in the decisions of that body. He added that though the British would gladly accept Marshall as the Overlord commander the fact was that all the President's associates appeared pleased with the present decision.

While I have never discussed the matter directly with Marshall, I have always been confident that it was his decision, more than any one else's, that sent me to the Overlord post. Since I first met General Marshall at the beginning of the war I felt for him only intense loyalty and respect, and I had already informed the President of my conviction that no one could undertake the Overlord command with greater prospect of success than could Marshall. I believed then, and I believe now, that he would have been as preeminent in field work as he was in the complicated duties he encountered in Washington.

Our Mediterranean experiences had reaffirmed the truth that unity, coordination, and cooperation are the keys to successful operations. War is waged in three elements, but there is no separate land, air or naval war. Unless all assets in all elements are efficiently combined and coordinated against a properly selected, common objective, their maximum potential power cannot be realized. Physical targets may be separated by the breadth of a continent or an ocean, but their destruction must contribute in maximum degree to the furtherance of the combined plan of operation. That is what coordination means.

Factor of Morale Is Greatest in War

Not only would I need commanders who understood this truth, but I must have those who appreciated the importance of morale and had demonstrated a capacity to develop and maintain it. Morale is the greatest single factor in successful war.

I was happy to secure Air Chief Marshall Tedder as my deputy for Overlord. In the Mediterranean he had won the respect and admiration of all his associates not only as a brilliant airman but as a stanch supporter of the "allied" principle as practiced in that command. Authority was also granted to take along my chief of staff, Gen. Walter B. Smith, without whose services it would have been difficult to organize a staff for the conduct of the great allied operation.

I at first understood that originally either General Alexander or General Montgomery was available for the command of the British forces in the new venture. At that time I expressed a preference for Alexander, primarily because I had been so closely associated with him and had developed for him an admiration and friendship which have grown with the years. I regarded Alexander as Britain's outstanding soldier in the field of strategy. He was, moreover, a friendly and agreeable type; Americans instinctively like him.

The Prime Minister finally decided, however, that Alexander should not be spared from the Italian operation, which would have an important effect upon the one we were to undertake the following summer, and from which he still hoped for almost decisive results.

Consequently General Montgomery was assigned to command the British forces in the new operation, a choice acceptable to me. General Montgomery has no superior in two most important characteristics. He quickly develops among British enlisted men an intense devotion and admiration—the greatest personal asset a commander can possess.

Montgomery's other outstanding characteristic is his tactical ability in what might be called the "prepared" battle. In the study of enemy positions and situations and in the combining of his own armor, artillery, air, and infantry to secure tactical success against the enemy he is careful, meticulous, and certain.

On Christmas Eve we listened to the radio, having learned that President Roosevelt was to make a significant speech. During that talk he made the first public announcement of my transfer to command of Overlord and included in the statement the designation of the title I was to assume. The title was Supreme Commander, Allied Expeditionary Forces.

This sounded very imposing and inspired Commander Butcher, my naval aide, to say that his major problem for the next week or so would be to design proper stationery to carry my exalted title.

Churchill Resolves Disagreement on Anzio

As the situation then stood in Italy it was apparent that a steady advance up the peninsula demanded a succession of outflanking operations by sea, preferably on both flanks. Head-on attacks against the enemy on his mountainous frontiers would be slow and extremely costly.

I agreed to the general desirability of continuing the advance but pointed out that the landing of two partially skeletonized divisions at Anzio, a hundred miles beyond the front lines as then situated, would not only be a risky affair but that the attack would not by itself compel the withdrawal of the German front. Military strategy may bear some similarity to the chessboard, but it is dangerous to carry the analogy too far. A threatened king in chess must be protected; in war he may instead choose to fight!

The Prime Minister was nevertheless determined to carry out the proposed operation. He and his staff not only felt certain that the assault would be a great and prompt success but they engaged to release the landing craft as quickly as the two divisions had been established on the beach.

In the final outcome the Anzio operation paid off handsomely but in its initial stages it developed exactly as my headquarters thought it would. In addition, the landing craft scheduled for transfer to the United Kingdom had to remain in the Mediterranean for a considerable length of time to provide rapid reinforcement for the hard-pressed troops at Anzio. Fortunately this circumstance did no harm to Overlord.

Bradley Nominated As Group Commander

Facing an early transfer to London I found myself entangled in a mass of terminal detail in the Mediterranean Theater.

At that time my own ideas as to the best possible allocation of American commanders to the two theaters were given in a telegram sent to General Marshall on December 23, 1943:

My preference for American Army group commander, when more than one American Army is operating in Overlord, is General Bradley. One of his Army commanders should probably be Patton; the other, a man that may be developed in Overlord operations or, alternatively, somebody like Hodges or Simpson, provided such officer could come over to United Kingdom at an early date and accompany Bradley through the early stages of the operations.

To my mind, Bradley should be the United States assaulting Army Commander and become Army group commander when necessary.

High Opinion Dated Back to West Point

My high opinion of Bradley, dating from our days at West Point, had increased daily during our months together in the Mediterranean. At my request he had come to Africa in February, 1943, as a major general to assist me in a role that we called "Eyes and Ears." He was authorized and expected to go where and when he pleased in the American zone to observe and report to me on anything he felt worthy of my attention. He was especially suited to act in such an intimate capacity, not only by reason of our long friendship, but because of his ability and reputation as a sound, painstaking, and broadly educated soldier.

Soon after his arrival in Africa he was assigned as deputy commander in the U. S. II Corps, then fighting in the Tebessa area. He was promoted to command this corps on April 16, 1943, and demonstrated real capacity for leadership. He was a keen judge of men and their capabilities and was absolutely fair and just in his dealings with them. Added to this, he was emotionally stable and possessed a grasp of larger issues that clearly marked him for high office.

I foresaw some possibility of friction in advancing Bradley to the highest American ground command in Overlord because I was also planning to use Patton in that operation, provided he concurred in the new arrangement, which would involve a reversal of the relative positions the two men had held in the successful Sicilian campaign.

Marshall Orders Trip to Washington

Both were my intimate friends of many years' standing and I knew that each would loyally accept any assigned duty. I was hopeful, however, that Patton, who for certain types of action was the outstanding soldier our country has produced, would wholeheartedly support the play I had in mind. I had a frank talk with him and was gratified to find that he thoroughly agreed that the role for which he personally was ideally suited was that of an Army commander. At that moment he wanted no higher post.

While engaged in all of these details and counting on getting away to England about the tenth of January, I received a Christmas telegram from General Marshall. He urged me to come immediately to Washington for short conferences with him and the President and for a brief breather before undertaking the new assignment. I protested, on the ground that time was vital and that, moreover, I could accomplish little by a visit to Washington until I had been in London at least long enough to familarize myself with the essentials of the problems there. General Marshall did not agree. He advised me to "allow someone else to run the war for twenty minutes," and to come on to Washington.

Upon arrival in the United States I met with the War Department staff and later with the President. Mr. Roosevelt was temporarily ill with influenza but seemed quite cheerful and kept me at his bedside for more than an hour as we discussed a hundred details of past and future operations. As always, he amazed me with his intimate knowledge of world geography. The most obscure places in faraway countries were always accurately placed on his mental map.

Last Talk With FDR Lasted an Hour

He took occasion to brief me on his post-hostilities occupational plans for Germany. He definitely wanted the northwest section as the United States area but listened attentively as I voiced my objection to dividing Germany into "national sectors." I admitted all the difficulties of true joint occupation but said we should insist upon that plan as the only practicable one—and one, moreover, which would quickly test the possibilities of real "quadripartite action." I urged, again, that occupied territories be turned over as quickly as possible, to civil authority. He seemed impressed but did not commit himself.

In none of the various talks I had with the President were domestic politics ever mentioned except casually. His son Elliott, whom I sometimes saw both in Africa and in England, likewise avoided politics as a subject of conversation except to refer to himself occasionally, in a jocular tone, as the "black sheep and reactionary of the family."

As I left the President I said, "I sincerely trust that you will quickly recover from your indisposition." He quickly replied, "Oh, I have not felt better in years. I'm in bed only because the doctors are afraid I might have a relapse if I get up too soon." I never saw him again.

The story of "Crusade in Europe" shifts in tomorrow's installment from the fighting in the Mediterranean to the great chapter of "Overlord," in the invasion of France. General Eisenhower tells of the massive planning work which went into the preparation for D-Day, his choice of subordinates, his struggle with the indiscretions of General Patton, and the revolutionary tactical plans, including artificial harbors on the Normandy coast, which led up to the great victory. Tomorrow's installment will be the thirteenth in the story of "Crusade in Europe."

This is a condensed serialization of Dwight D. Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe." It contains highlights of the book to be published November 22, 1948, by Doubleday & Company. Copyrighted by Doubleday & Company, Inc.

D. C. Realtors To Fight Rent Law Extension

By Conrad P. Harness
Post Reporter

New York, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The District's organized realtors will support the fight against further extensions of rent control and any public housing proposal, Raymond M. Taylor, president of the Washington Real Estate Board, stated today.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards, meeting in convention here, will continue to fight any legislative proposals to extend rent control beyond the March 31, 1949, deadline. They also will oppose any proposed public housing measure, according to Taylor. The latter emphasized he was speaking only for the Washington group and was merely carrying out a policy laid out by the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Other highlights of the convention, attended by over 3500 realtors, including 50 from the Washington area, include:

Dr. Melchior Palyi, economist, told the convention that the Marshall Plan was boomeranging against the United States. The Marshall Plan is raising the standard of living of western Europe and weakening that section at the same time. The people there, he contended, are living at such a high standard that they are not making productive investments to strengthen their economy in the future.

Dr. Palyi is a research economist for the University of Chicago and Northwestern University. He has just returned from a two months' tour of Europe.

Supply of new homes is abundant "for the effective demand," a past president of the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers said today.

Board to Ask Equality With Rest of Nation

New York, Nov. 17 (AP). — The Washington (D. C.) Real Estate Board plans again to ask equality of treatment with the rest of the country in the matter of rent regulations, Raymond M. Taylor, its president, said today.

The board will take no action here at the National Association of Real Estate Boards convention, he said, since the District is under a separate administrator and does not come under the general Federal rent control law.

What specific action the Washington board will take will be decided at a future meeting of the group, probably in December or January, Taylor explained.

"Assuming that we don't oppose the principle of rent control," Taylor said, "and I'm not predicting what our action will be, we will without doubt ask again for the right of landlords and tenants to negotiate a voluntary increase up to 15 per cent and for decontrol of housing units never before rented."

These are features of the existing Federal law which never have been extended to the District of Columbia, he said.

Taylor said the board would support the national association in any stand against public housing because of the "socialization" features involved.

Tuck Requests Board to Study Finance Firms

Richmond, Va., Nov. 17 (AP).—Governor Tuck today asked the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council to make a "careful study" of finance companies doing business in Virginia.

The Governor requested the study with a view toward determining if regulatory legislation should be recommended to the next General Assembly.

In a letter to State Senator M. M. Long, council chairman, the Governor also asked the VALC to review existing law governing the activities of industrial loan associations, to determine if greater safeguards should be placed on the deposits they accept from the public.

The effect of the Governor's request, a spokesman in his office said, would be to revive a joint resolution offered on the day prior to adjournment of the 1948 session of the General Assembly.

Governor Tuck, in his letter to Senator Long, referred to the Maryland industrial finance law, and asked the council to investigate the desirability of recommending for Virginia a law similar in principle.

Such a law would regulate the procedures by which businesses, using their private capital only, make loans on terms generally comparable to those presently being made by industrial loan associations.

New Schools Urged Before Apartments

Halting of apartment construction in Prince Georges County until school construction catches up with essential needs was urged yesterday by a group of citizens at a zoning hearing in the Conuty Service Building, Hyattsville.

The demand was made during a hearing by the county board of commissioners on a petition for a permit to sonstruct a 394-unit deluxe-type apartment project to cost five million dollars in Michigan Park Hills.

T. Hammond Welsh, jr., agent for the petitioner for the apartments, also requested commercial zoning to accommodate a seven-store shopping center on ground adjacent to the 19-acre tract at Sargent and Chillum rds.

Petition Signed by 150

Action on the petition was postponed until a further hearing December 15.

A protesting petition signed by 150 persons was presented by William H. Cusick, 52 Chillum rd., who headed a delegation of 25 members of the Chillum Civic Association.

Cusick told the board the citizens are opposed to more apartments until the school system catches up with the expanding population. Children of the area are split up among the J. Enos Ray, Mount Rainier and Agar Road Schools, all now on a part-time shift basis, he said.

He quoted Superintendent of Schools G. Gardner Shugart as terming the school situation "critical."

Following hearing of this petition, Attorney T. Howard Duckett requested postponement of the hearing on apartment zoning of 63 acres of the McCormick-Goodhart property on University lane and New Hampshire ave. near Takoma Park, and an accompanying commercial petition for an adjacent 10-acre tract. The petition was filed by Leander McCormick-Goodhart and Joshua Evans, trustees.

December 15 was set for hearing of this petition also.

Earlier, two petitions for apartment zoning by Harry Gorin were approved. They were each for low density apartments of 400 units costing about two million dollars, one for two parcels on Riggs rd. south of University lane and the other south of University lane between Anne ave. and the Montgomery County line and Lockney ave., near Takoma Park.

Commercial Zoning Approved

In other actions, the commissioners granted commercial listing to William Brainin, agent, for more than 5 acres of the Greenlaw tract, New Hampshire and Eastern aves., Takoma Park, and to William E. Taliaferro, owner, for five lots in the 4200 block of Lawrence st., Colmar Manor; zoned industrial 9 acres next to Northwest Branch between Edmonston ave. and Baltimore blvd., Edmonston, for Hervey G. Machen, agent; postponed action on a similar request by Leo K. Donovan, owner, for nearly 75 acres on River rd., opposite Tuxedo rd., Tuxedo, until December 15, and approved apartment zoning on two lots at Huron and Porter aves., Suitland, for Rafael Jordon, owner.

Hitting Policeman Gets Man 120 Days

Joseph M. Natoli, 23, of 3421 Q st. nw., was sentenced yesterday in Municipal Court to serve 120 days in jail for assaulting Police Pvt. Jack Cornette.

The officer testified that when he arrested Natoli in the 3200 block of M. st. nw., for disorderly conduct, his nightstick was wrested from him by the defendant. Cornette said he subdued Natoli after being hit over the head.

A three-judge tribunal yesterday upheld the Capital Transit Co. in its opposition to the joint-fare system for trans-Potomac riders.

The court ruled that the Interstate Commerce Commission was without jurisdiction to set the basic 16-cent rate between any place in Washington and the Pentagon, the Navy Annex, the Air Force Annex, National Airport and intermediate Virginia destinations.

At present 24 per cent of the 17,000 bus riders to and from the Virginia installations use the joint-fare system daily, according to court testimony.

Should there be no appeal, joint-fare commuters might as well tear up the 6-cent receipts they have been saving for several months. Barring the appeal, cash fare riders will pay a total of 23 cents each way. The fare is less for token or weekly passholders.

The deciding tribunal was composed of Wilbur K. Miller of the United States Court of Appeals and Alexander Holtzoff and Edward A. Tamm of the District Court.

The jurists held that the District Public Utilities Commission has jurisdiction over the Capital Transit Co. as it now operates within the city. The PUC had ordered the CTC to refuse to honor the joint-fare tickets which have been in use here since the war years. Two Virginia lines had joined with CTC in the arrangement.

The CTC lost its first court case involving the joint fares but, then obtained a court order allowing it to demand six cents—for which the rider obtained a receipt—above the 16-cent joint fare. The additional sums were kept in escrow in case the courts should uphold the ICC.

The court yesterday directed that a permanent injunction be issued against enforcement of the ICC orders.

The transit company was represented by Edmund L. Jones and the law firm of Hewes and Awalt.

Vast Health Plan Ready, Ewing Says

Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing yesterday told State health officers to educate and organize their States and communities to work for federalized medicine.

"We are set to go on the most comprehensive program of health that has ever been offered to the people of the United States," he declared.

At the same time he castigated attacks on national compulsory health insurance, declaring they "could be summarily dismissed as ridiculous if they were not backed by ruthless forces in the United States who close their eyes to the health needs of our people."

He spoke here at the sole public session of the four-day annual session of State and Territorial health officers, which concluded deliberations yesterday.

Before ending their conference, the delegates approved many resolutions, including one asking creation of a cabinet-rank Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and another urging congressional passage of a local health service act. The latter, its sponsors said, would raise Federal health service financing aid to the States from its present $10,000,000 level to $75,000,000 a year.

Ewing, interpreting President Truman's reelection as a go-ahead signal for the President's 10-year national health program, declared:

"We have a golden opportunity to complete the whole program (social and economic program initiated by President Roosevelt)—to expand and develop it to the point where we can all say: 'This, now, is pretty nearly it.' And that's precisely what we propose to do."

Warming up further to his subject, he reiterated statistics showing the need for Federal direction of medical services, and health service financing by deductions from pay checks.

The basic problem, he said, is how to provide adequate medical care "for the some 68 million people who live in families where the total income is less than $3000. An average family of four persons or more trying to live in that level just cannot afford to pay for medical care on the present fee basis."

He compared the health program to Social Security, which he termed "that magnificent effort, on the part of the Roosevelt Administration, to afford some means of security for our old people during their declining years." And like Social Security, he said, national health insurance "has been attacked as a socialist experiment, just as public education was attacked 100 years ago."

Health Insurance For All to Be Aim

Miami Beach, Fla., Nov. 17 (AP). National Commisioner Arthur J. Altmeyer of the Social Security Administration said today Government health insurance for everyone wil be recommended to the Eighty-first Congress.

Addressing 100 regiona and national officials of the Social Security Administration, Altmeyer said the proposal—which would be operated similar to the way workers and employers pay for social security—will be recommended as part of an improved social security program.

"In this way, the person having the insurance will be able to pay for hospital and medical bills, choosing his own hospital and doctor," he said. "Such insurance will protect people who are caught short of funds or could not afford the medical care they need."

Junior League Told of Work Of Child Clinic

Dr. Reginald S. Lourie, pediatrician-psychiatrist, yesterday warned the Junior League of Washington not to expect spectacular results from their newest hospital project.

Major function of the project, the league-financed child guidance clinic at Children's Hospital, will be to prevent instability in later life by attacking growing maladjustments of children, he said.

Dr. Lourie addressed more than 100 members of the league, assembled at the hospital for a progress report on the new clinic. The clinic, only one of its kind in Washington, began its work with child patients in September.

To date, said Dr. Lourie, emotional disorders of more than 100 children have been diagnosed at the clinic, and treatments prescribed. Even more important, he said, has been the spread of interest among hospital staff and medical students to "handle the emotional problems of children" along with their clinical care.

"It is hoped that eventually the pediatrician may be able to think in terms of preventing habit and personality distortions before they occur, just as they now think in terms of routinely preventing contagious diseases."

Father Acts

Forgery Case Against Pitts Is Dismissed

Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court yesterday dismissed charges that Marion D. Pitts, 31, forged his father's name to $1577 in Goverment checks.

Federal authorities had charged that Pitts, a meat clerk residing at 1437 Rhode Island ave. nw., used his father's name on Veterans Administration checks due the latter because of the death of his youngest son during the last war.

The father, Ellis R. Pitts, 84, of Richmond, Va., went into the court and signed papers exonerating Marion. The elder Pitts said he had given the son authority to use his name.

According to Assistant United States Attorney Richard Roberts, who moved for the dismissa, the case developed when the father told VA he had not received the checks and wanted to know what had become of them. Pitts was represented by Attorney Downey Rice.

permit this practice to expand it will be an unfortunate day for the administration of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board."

Wallace brought out the "mud-slinging" angle Tuesday when, under cross examination he was asked why he had not told the board earlier of having seen Police Pvt. Frank N. Manthos in the grill. (Manthos subsequently had termed Wallace's charges against the grill "untrue.")

Wallace explained he had not mentioned Manthos because he had been cautioned against "mud-slinging" which he interpreted as dragging other policemen into the case.

(Major Barrett was not available for comment last night on the charges.)

Prosecutor Wise's demand for perjury action stemmed from flat contradiction in the testimony of Wallace and Manthos, with Manthos swearing that 56 of the 57 charges made by Wallace were false and that Wallace had admitted framing the proprietors of the grill.

"One of the two witnesses lied," Wise asserted, "and I believe it was Manthos."

Declaring that "what had started as an ABC hearing has developed into a scandal in the Capital City of the United States," Wise stated "what interest Manthos had in the outcome of this case, I don't know. We may never know and we can't make him tell us."

Wallace Uncorroborated

Donohue, in defense, dwelt on the point that Wallace's testimony as to violations at the grill was entirely uncorroborated.

In view of "the testimony of 37 other witnesses who saw no such violations, I say Wallace is a liar and the truth isn't in him," Donohue exclaimed.

The attorney asked why Wallace didn't arrest "one lone drunk or lone prostitute" on the last night of his investigation, in order to have some corroborative evidence.

"I never saw a citation in which no one was called to corroborate the testimony of one witness," Donohue pursued.

Declaring that while prostitutes may have been seen in the grill, Donohue held that being a prostitute was no crime and that the violation lay in soliciting.

"I assume that a well-behaved prostitute is entitled to a glass of beer or a sandwich as well as I am," he said.

The attorney wound up with a comment that the board in such cases acts, in effect, as both prosecutor and judge.

Attorney Thomas David, coattorney for defense, told the board not one arrest had been made at the grill in the last 2½ years.

The board, which agreed to drop two of the 57 charges, took the case under advisement following closing arguments.

In the event of suspension of license for more than 30 days or outright revocation, the licensee has the right to appeal the decision to the District Commissioners and the courts.

Beach Quits Police Group Election Race

Sergt. James G. Beach has withdrawn from the three-man race for president of the District of Columbia Police Association, and the long-delayed election will be held December 21, it was disclosed yesterday.

Beach

Beach and Sergt. Joseph L. Proctor, both of the Fourteenth Precinct, were tied in second-place nomination with 26 votes each by the association's general board, which met October 19. Corpl. Ras A. Nielson, Fourth Precinct, was nominated with 47 votes.

Nielsen Proctor

Bylaws of the association stipulate that only two names shall appear on the ballot.

The announcement came after a session of the association Tuesday night. Beach dropped out just before offering a resolution—which was unanimously rejected—to hire a $15,000-a-year public relations representative for the 2280-member association.

The general board consists of representatives from each subdivision of the association's three services—Metropolitan, Park and White House police.

Faced with the problem of which two condidates to consider as official nominees, the board met November 12.

It voted to dissolve itself and call for election of a new board in hopes of renominating officers and breaking the tie between Beach and Proctor.

When Beach withdrew from the race, the board announced that "all action taken at the special meeting held Friday, November 12, has been declared null and void, and the minutes of that meeting will not become part of the association's record."

Other candidates for office include Pvts. James J. Lyons, Park Police, and Hovey A. Ford, Third Precinct, first vice president; Pvts. Archibald V. Dixon, Harbor Precinct, and William A. Wyckoff, Third Precinct, second vice president; Corpl. Charles L. Wright and Pvt. Chester F. Bernard, both of Tenth Precinct, recording secretary; Pvts Samuel W. Stickley, administrative headquarters, and Charles P. Flynn, Twelfth Precinct, financial secretary.

Also Pvt. Edgar S. Waller, administrative headquarters, and Corpl. William E. McCarten, First Precinct, treasurer; Pvt. Mary C. Goggins, Women's Bureau, and Lieut. Thomas T. Heffernan, Traffic Division, trustee for three years, and Lieut. Michael J. Dowd, Capitol Detail, and Pvt. Robert D. Dyas, Fourteenth Precinct, legislative committeeman for three years.

Man Accused Of $71 Forgery

A 49-year-old laborer was charged yesterday with forging the name of—no less—the former head of the Police Department's Check and Fraud Squad.

Robert J. Paul, no fixed address, admitted forging to a $71 check the name of Dewey L. Guest, who retired in August from his job—investigating check forgeries. United States Commissier Cyril S. Lawrence held Paul under $300 bond for grand jury action.

Paul was once a building laborer for Guest on a house near Cheverly, Md. The check was forged in May while Guest was still a policeman.

David Higgins, present check squad head, said Paul was picked out of a police lineup Tuesday. Higgins said that Guest's signature had been practiced but that the "L" middle initial was faulty.

Paul was given 360 day in jail yesterday after he was found guilty in Municipal Court on another charge—stealing goods from a parked car.

Young to Name 3 Men Today For Complaint Review Board

A District Building official yesterday announced the names of the three men whom Commissioner John Russell Young today will recommend to comprise the membership of the new Complaint Review Board.

Wilner

The men are: Joseph A. Wilner, local attorney and businessman who was a member of the three-man trial board that recently heard charges against Fire Chief Clement Murphy.

Floyd D. Akers, owner and president of the Capital Cadillac Co.

William J. Mileham, venetian blind dealer and the District's chief air raid warden for 22 months during World War II.

If approved at today's meeting of the Board of Commissioners, the three-man board will become effective Friday, when a reorganization of the police trial board procedure is put into practice.

Akers

Mileham

It will be the duty of the new complaint review board to decide whether policemen should be tried in cases where Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett feels the charges are questionable.

The names of Wilner, Akers and Mileham were submitted to Young by Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher, who drew up the police trial board reorganization plan, and approved by the Commissioner.

Offer Of Help

President Truman's statement and his letter to Mr. Herbert Hoover on the work of the Commission on Reorganization of the Executive Branch is worth more than passing notice. What appears on the surface to be strictly a formal expression of hope for success in reality goes far deeper. Its first consequence should be to quash any postelection idea that the Hoover Commission's recommendations will become a political football.

On the formal side, the President said he looks forward to recommendations that will help to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the Government. These are not just words off the end of the tongue. Mr. Truman has a personal stake in remedial action. In fact, he is probably the one person most concerned with reordering the upper structure of the executive branch. Having scores of separate department and agency heads reporting directly to him is not merely bad administrative practice. It puts an intolerable burden on the man himself. Even without this specific recognition of the need for reorganization, the President's concern with the problem should never have been in any doubt.

In recognizing again the need for administrative reorganization and in reaffirming his interest in the work of the Hoover Commission Mr. Truman has firmly testified that no partisan wedge will be driven into what is a joint attack on a pressing problem. The move partakes of high-order political statesmanship. So, too, does his offer of cooperation. "If at any time," wrote the President, "the commission's work can be facilitated by action on my part, you have but to let me know."

Here, perhaps, is a hint of readiness to iron out in advance of public discussion any difference that might later interfere with smooth sailing for the commission's recommendations. The commission must, of course, retain its independence. But the cause of Government reorganization would certainly be strengthened if the commission should arrange in advance to get the President's comments on its proposals. It is not a question of bargaining but of bringing out the best reorganization plan that has a chance for enactment.

Clearing The Deck

Some of the ideas that the busy commentators have been putting into the President's mind have now been disposed of. He has no intention of going to the Kremlin. He will not accept the Evatt-Lie bid for four-power talks till the Soviet blockade of Berlin has been lifted. The good sense and crispness of the presidential remarks show a man whose head has not been turned by victory. It is on this hypothesis that much of the speculation about Key West has hitherto been based. Without a doubt the President wants to do his level best to contribute to peace and in all likelihood will not be content to have American diplomacy to this end directed for him either by permanent officials or by other powers. But there is equally no doubt of his awareness of the fact that the first essential of the kind of peace we are seeking is that it must be defended. This, indeed, seems to be the frame of mind in which the President approaches the peace problem. There were signs at his first postelection press conference both that he must be "shown"—that he wants evidence of good faith prior to negotiation, an element that is absent from the Vishinsky response to the Evatt-Lie proposal—and that there is no umbrella in his equipment.

A positive as well as a negative side in the presidential plans is apparent. A full review of foreign policy with the administrators of it is promised for Monday. This may well lead to important developments. A spur to the Atlantic pact is badly needed as the basis of consultation about the Far East as well as defense in Europe. Instead of seeming indifference to a way out of the Berlin impasse, now that the airlift is functioning well, the situation requires the assumption of fearless leadership. No diplomacy can be altogether inflexible even about Berlin. We agree that the raising of the blockade should precede conversations with Soviet Russia, but is it necessary to apply this rule rigidly to all the kinds of Soviet blockade in existence in Berlin? We merely raise the question as worthy of exploration on Monday. Moreover, the Arabs must be told in unmistakable accent that the United States is interested in settlement of the Palestine controversy in accord with the spirit, if not the letter, of the November 29 resolution, rather than meting out punishment on the basis of a quite infeasible truce the talk about which is merely serving to hold up conversations necessary to a settlement. The way that the President has cleared the deck seems to be an assurance that all these issues will be reviewed realistically.

It Could Be Stolen

President Truman is doubtless being deluged at his Key West retreat with suggestions as to what should go into his January message to Congress. Obviously he cannot include in one message all the constructive and forward-looking proposals that are being dumped into his lap. We do hope, however, that he will have something to say about our obsolete electoral machinery which leaves the door open to theft of the Presidency.

This newspaper has previously deplored the maneuvers reported in the South to swing part or all of the electoral votes won by Governor Thurmond to Mr. Truman. Should any such scheme be carried out, the President might feel compelled to spurn the votes thus dubiously transferred to him from another candidate. We have heard rumors that an even more fantastic scheme is afoot by which electors in the South who were pledged to the President would withhold their votes from him and thus prevent his election unless he should agree to compromise his civil rights program. Of course this scheme, if such scheme there is, would be so diabolical as to bring down universal condemnation upon anyone who would have the gall to propose it. But it does serve to emphasize the fact that, under the present outmoded constitutional provision, it is not only possible but also legal in some States for electors to assert their caprice over the instructions given them by the voters.

One other serious defect is illustrated by what happened in Tennessee in the recent election. Two of the 12 electoral candidates on the regular Democratic ticket announced that, if elected, they would cast their votes for Governor Thurmond. They were elected along with the 10 candidates who favored Mr. Truman. Obviously the rank and file of voters cannot be expected to distinguish between electors of the same party on the same ticket who plan to throw their votes to different candidates. This kind of mixup is almost equivalent to requiring citizens to vote blindfolded.

The only safe course is to sweep the go-betweens out of our electoral system. Let the people vote directly for the candidates they prefer. When these votes are counted in each State, that State's electoral vote can then be divided among the presidential candidates in the same proportion as the popular vote has been divided. That method would not upset our Federalist system. But it would make our presidential elections genuine contests throughout the country, instead of being confined to a few pivotal States, and it would close the door to theft of the Presidency.

President Green's Blast

President Green urged the delegates to the AFL annual convention to work for repeal of the Hobbs and Lea Acts because they are "just as destructive in their fields as the Taft-Hartley Act." In view of this sweeping indictment it is time to take another look at these so-called destructive measures. All the Hobbs Act does is to make it a felony punishable by fine or imprisonment for anyone to obstruct interstate commerce by means of robbery or extortion. But for a Supreme Court decision, which in effect legalized the racketeering practices of certain unions by distorting the plain intention of the Antiracketeering Act of 1934, this protective legislation would not have been necessary. Without it, however, in case of repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act a racketeering fringe of the labor movement would be free to indulge a penchant for holding up drivers engaged in transporting goods across State lines and forcing them to pay for the privilege of delivering their goods.

The act does not interfere in any way with legitimate union activities. Indeed, the President signed the Hobbs Act only after being advised by the Attorney General that it would not deprive labor of any of its recognized rights, including the right to strike and to picket and engage in peaceful concerted action. In brief, the only destruction aimed at is destruction of personal immunities for union members indulging in acts of intimidation and violence condemned by any civilized community and, of course, punishable when committed by other citizens.

The purpose of the Lea Act is to protect radio stations from the exactions of Mr. Petrillo by making it unlawful "by the use of express or implied threat of force, violence, intimidation or duress" to force them to employ more persons than are needed or to pay more than once for the privilege of broadcasting recordings or transcriptions. This newspaper has repeatedly criticized this act not because it aims to suppress indefensible featherbedding practices but because it is particularistic legislation restricted to a single industry. With the passage of the Taft-Hartley Act, prohibition of featherbedding practices of the kind banned by the Lea Act was extended to all unions engaged in interstate commerce. Hence the Lea Act serves no present purpose. But if the general ban on featherbedding were to be permanently dropped through repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, the Lea Act would again provide a single industry with the protection denied to others subject to equal or even greater pressure from arrogant labor czars.

Repeal of the Lea Act might, therefore, logically be urged on the ground of discrimination even though the Supreme Court has upheld its constitutionality. But it is quite evident that Mr. Green's objection to the act is not based on its lack of comprehensiveness but is directed against even a limited suppression of practices condemned by every standard of justice and fairness. If he succeeds in his ill-advised campaign to remove the legislative restrictions against oppressive and terroristic union tactics, he will bring disrepute on law-abiding organizations, arouse public resentment, and cause the public to renew demands for stiffer labor laws.

German Press

One of the really substantial accomplishments of American Military Government in Germany has been the creation of a democratic press. It is ironic that the same agency which helped restore faith in the printed word also has allowed a condition to grow up which menaces the future of a genuinely free press. This is the complex of regulations which will make it virtually impossible for the new democratic publishers to continue publication of their newspapers when the present printing plants are returned to their former owners.

The trouble has root in a conflict within military government itself. After the total blackout of German publications following VE-Day, the information control division had the task of searching out German journalists without the taint of Naziism. This was no easy task after 12 years of Hitler's rule. A small group of editors was assembled and new publications were licensed. Gradually these newspapers have overcome the distrust of the people, and today they are immensely popular.

Initially, information control sought to protect the future of the independent press by extending the moratorium on return of printing plants to former owners for a period long enough to enable the new publishers to gain a foothold. The property control division, however, limited this prohibition to 1952. At that time the previous owners, if not major Nazis, may get their plants back. Meanwhile a military government ruling setting aside 20 per cent of the income from independent newspapers against the purchase of printing plants has been nullified by the currency reform.

The plants in which the Nazi organs were published are the only ones available in Germany today, and there is no early prospect of new construction. As a result the owners, many of whom are being denazified, are merely collecting their rents and awaiting a chance to get back into business. German editors fear that in 1952 they will be served with ultimatums either to get out or to make their policies conform to those of the plant owners.

Probably it is too late to apply in Germany the ruling invoked in France, which required former collaborators to sell their printing plants. But certainly it is not too late to give the independent press the protection it will need in order to compete and survive. One way would be to require that printing plant owners continue to make their facilities available to such publications after 1952. Further assistance could be given by lowering the taxes which prevent new newspaper enterprises from amassing any capital. Since the licensing system is soon to end, these problems will have to be worked out in cooperation with the German authorities. But military government could help to insure that adequate guarantees will be provided before the plants are returned to their owners. An independent press is both a safeguard against the revival of antidemocratic movements and an essential instrument in German reeducation. American authorities ought to be exerting every effort to see that it is not compromised.

Where Credit Is Due

With somewhat more than a million votes under his belt, Mr. Henry Wallace is already blowing Gideon's trumpet for a Progressive Party triumph in 1952. He has a long way to go, and in our opinion is doing his cause more harm than good by claiming credit for putting Mr. Truman back in the White House and the Democrats into control of Congress. Like his ungenerous telegram "conceding" victory to Truman in the form of a lecture on what the President must do, this distortion of the evidence can only detract still more from Wallace's personal reputation.

Credit for the outcome of the election belongs elsewhere, as indicated by the returns from New York City's Eleventh Assembly District. The voters of this Harlem district numbered 27,477. Mr. Wallace had appealed to them and their fellow citizens of the Negro community elsewhere for support on racial grounds. The results show that 61 per cent of them voted for Truman, 16.8 per cent for Dewey, and 12.6 per cent for the Progressive Party candidate. Even if this cannot be taken as proof of Negro reaction elsewhere in the country, it shows that Mr. Wallace failed in his effort here to splinter the Negro voters away from the regular parties. In refusing to be led astray by appeals to race, we think the Harlem voters showed sounder judgment than their would-be leader.

Herd Thinkers Reconnoiter

By Malvina Lindsay

Mr. Digit's Plans

(This column today presents an exclusive interview with a public figure who has recently been politically discredited.)

"Mr. Digit, as the celebrated rank and file man who has been deciding what we should all eat, drink, wear, read, think, see at the movies, hear on the radio, how do you feel about the setback you received in the election?"

"What setback? Now a mathematical interpretation of the poll figures will show——"

"Excuse me, but what I want to know is: Are you going to retire?"

"Me retire! How could they run this country without me? How would they know what color of tires to put on baby carriages; what kind of cellophane to put on potato chips to give them glamour; how to write books, paint pictures, compose music and manufacture nylon stockings that will sell; how to preach sermons that will draw crowds; how to love, marry, rear children the way the public wants?"

"But, Mr. Digit, I understand there's a revolt developing against you."

"Who says so? Why, just look at what I've done for this country! Look at the soap operas, the hillbilly talk, the gushing women and the cute men I've put on the radio. And look at the commentators I've run off of it!"

"BY THE WAY, Mr. Digit, were you responsible for routing Cyrus Sage?"

"I sure was. Why, that man Sage had only one million listeners. Now, you take my man Jed Jawsmith. He's got 10 million. And another of my boys, Simeon Rant, has 15 million."

"But what about the three million who want to hear Sage? Don't you think they shoud have a voice in a democratic country?"

"Why should they? How much of Jimp's Rejuvenator do they buy?"

"But after all, the people who think——"

"People of today aren't supposed to think. This is a technical age. I try to tell the newspapers that. And, by the way, look what I've done for the country there. Look at the comics and gossip and scandal and leg pictures I've put into the press. I've even run a lot of editorial pages entirely out of the newspapers."

"I suppose you claim credit for the state of the magazines."

"Absolutely! Look at the fiction in the slick magazines! I choose it—or rather my wife does. Look at the girly-girly covers. I started that. Any everyone knows what I've done for the movies. And look what I, or rather my wife, has done for merchandising."

"Is that why a woman can't buy a pair of shoes she can walk in?"

"Exactly! Me, I don't like 'em."

"BUT I suppose you'll have to go a little slowly now in view of what happened November 2."

"Not at all! I have big plans ahead. Take merchandising. Of course we'll have a reorganization of technique in marketing research—it's under way now—but I'll soon be passing on everything you buy, from your toothpicks to your electric banana peeler. Then I expect to move in further on book publishing—the business is lagging—and mastermind, I mean mongrel mind, it. And I have great plans for television—more prize-fights, turtle races, clam bakes, bathing beauties, crime monsters, gang leaders, murder trials, love nests. I'll go to town with the soap operas. Just think of seeing as well as hearing Moaning Mabel!"

"But, Mr. Digit, a lot of people don't want to see her."

"Get this! It's what I want that counts in this country."

"Aren't you a little cocky considering——"

"You seem to forget that I am What The People Want."

"I'm sorry. But-er-er isn't there some confusion at present as to just who you are—that is, in view of the polls?"

"The polls! Oh that's a mere technicality. That's being straightened out. New techniques, new pretested, sub-sampling, new stratified quotas."

"But just a minute! The human element involved—you know, people."

"Oh, people! With our new techniques we'll just reduce them to digits; no, I mean decimals—well perhaps, more accurately ciphers."

Too Many Drivers

Agreements to prevent atomic and all other war need these things:

(1) Enough inspection to discover possible use of atomic or other prohibited weapons; (2) an international force strong enough to prevent such use; (3) enough national disarmament to make the international force strong enough; (4) a body or bodies with enough power to control such inspection, international force and national disarmament; (5) a body or bodies with enough authority to decide disputes; (6) men approved by the states to compose all these bodies and measures by which they can be selected and thus approved.

Nine of the eleven members of the Security Council have proposed inspection forces with enough knowledge to make such inspections. No government has yet proposed measures that even profess to meet these other needs.

The United States proposals, and to some extent those of the other permanent Council members, and specially those of the Soviets, expressly oppose any change in the veto power over the use of United Nations forces to enforce any proposals whatever.

The situation is like the nations trying to travel the road to world peace in a great omnibus. It needs four wheels of atomic inspection, international force, national disarmament, and a tribunal for disputes that are bound to occur. It needs a driver and it needs a measure for agreeing on a driver. It can't even start without all these six things.

All the 11 states in the Council have proposed a bus with five drivers all of whom must agree in driving it but any one of whom may, for any reason, put on the brakes and stop it any time it chooses.

Even if the Soviets rejected proposals to meet these needs, the other nations have to meet them for themselves alone.

Blair And Van Buren

One of the notable fictions that Washington newspapers persist in perpetuating finds its way into the columns of The Washington Post November 11: "Francis P. Blair, editor of the Globe newspaper, was brought to Washington by President Jackson."

Blair was brought to Washington by Amos Kendall, not to serve President Jackson, but to promote the presidential ambitions and aspirations of Martin Van Buren. Jackson already had a strong newspaper in Washington, the United States Telegraph, owned and edited by his friend, Gen. Duff Green. The Telegraph was also a supporter of th Vice President, John C. Calhoun, for the succession. If Calhoun succeeded Jackson as President, Van Buren's hopes would thereby be defeated. Hence it was necessary that the Van Buren party should have a newspaper at the Capital that would destroy Calhoun and the Telegraph.

Alexander Gurdon Abell of New York, who published a biography of Van Buren in 1844, in that work states it was a fact that "Blair came to Washington in 1831, without types or press—received Mr. Van Buren's missive to the leaders of the party at New York—was set up in Washington, and his press paid for by Messrs. Noah, Swartwout, Hoyt, Bowne, Jackson, Hamilton, Gouverneur and Cornelius W. Lawrence." These gentlemen were the Van Buren leaders in New York State.

Abell says that Blair "speedily rose from poverty to immense wealth—played on his organ, the Globe, the party tune his employers required—and no other—where they enjoined silence he was mute—if they bade him attack vice or virtue—the good or the bad—he was ready . . . He could take any part. But to his keepers he was tame—a word from them awed him into stillness."

This able and remarkable man was a Virginian and a Democrat. At the behest of Van Buren he broke with the South and the Democratic Party, joined the Free Soil movement, organized the Republican Party in 1856, and nominated Lincoln in 1860. He is credited with being the author of the notorious Helper Book, one of the historic books of our political history; concerning that he would admit to no more than being the compiler of the compendium made from it, which was the Republican campaign book of '58 and '60. After President Lincoln's Cabinet (except Blair's son) had voted in favor of removing the garrison from Fort Sumter, and Lincoln had told Senator Douglas that it would be done, "and there would be no war," this vengeful old man, by threat of impeachment, actually forced the President to override his Cabinet and send reinforcements to that fortress. Thus the terrible war of 1861 began.

Scathed In Reverse

Marquis Child, in your November 11 issue, states:

"The score on the House Un-American Activities Committee as of today stands: Chairman J. Parnell Thomas indicted . . . Representatives Richard B. Vail of Illinois and John McDowell of Pennsylvania defeated . . .

"Representative Karl Mundt of South Dakota was elected to the Senate. This leaves only one Republican survivor unscathed. That is Representative Richard M. Nixon of California, who was reelected in a contest in which his only opponent was a Wallaceite.

"This illustrates once again the high mortality rate of the members . . ."

So Marquis Child includes poor, poor Mr. Mundt's elevation to the Senate by the voters of all South Dakota in order to get down to "one Republican survivor unscathed." Bet you a lot of losing candidates for the Senate wish they had been "scathed" by their constituents like Mundt was.

As for the statement about Mr. Nixon, the reason his only opponent was a Wallaceite was because he was so strong in the district—so strong that, prior to the general election, he won the nomination of both the Republicans and Democrats under the peculiar cross-filing permitted in California.

For sheer stupidity this column deserves some sort of prize.

Latvia's Sad Anniversary

At the end of the First World War, the proclamation of Woodrow Wilson solemnly stated the rights of self-determination for every nation.

In eastern Europe the representatives of three nations—Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania—proclaimed them free and independent states. The proclamation of Latvia took place in Riga on November 18, 1918.

However, Russia, where the Reds had seized power, recognized neither the proclamation by Woodrow Wilson, nor the desires of the Latvian people to live in peace in their own country.

Red troops occupied the eastern provinces of Latvia and prepared to march on to her capital, Riga. The armed forces of the new Latvian state were too small. They had to retreat.

Red troops started to persecute the Latvian population. If they found an icon in the room of a farm, they regarded this farmer an anti-Communist and shot him. The churches were turned into stables.

The nation wholly understood the seriouness of the moment. The Latvian army increased to 40,000 men. The first Prime Minister of Latvia, Karl Ulmanis, got a supply of arms from the United States and Great Britain and led his nation in a decisive battle. Russian Communists invaded Latvia from the east and at the same time German forces came from the west. This war of liberty in which Latvians were allied with Estonians and Lithuanians lasted for about a year and a half. Latvians, fighting side by side with Poles, crushed the last resistance of the Red troops in January, 1920.

On August 11, 1920, a treaty of peace between Latvia and Russia was signed, in which Russia unreservedly recognizes the independence, self-subsistancy and sovereignity of the Latvian state and voluntary and for eternal times . . ."

On September 22, 1922, Latvia became a member of the League of Nations.

The whole nation devoted itself to diligent work and the wounds of war soon healed. Unemployment and economic crises were unknown.

In August, 1939, Molotov and Ribbentrop signed an agreement in Moscow for sharing the territories of the Baltic States and Poland.

On June 17, 1940, thousands of Russian tanks invaded Latvia. Latvian President Karl Ulmanis and the members of the Latvian government were captured. A new government was seated which consisted of Communist agents and some quislings of Latvia. All the Latvian newspapers were closed. Meetings and even Latvian national songs were forbidden. Only the Communist Party and Russian culture could be praised.

The net of the secret police of Reds was completed. Every night hundreds of Latvians were taken away from their homes and were lost without trace. In the middle of June, 1941, 10,000 people were arrested in one night.

At the end of June, 1941, the Baltic areas were occupied by the German troops. They continued destroying what there was left yet undestroyed by Russians.

In the summer of 1944, the Red wolves began their bloody song in Latvia for the third time and it is still continuing. Some letters which reach this side of the iron curtain in secret ways are nothing but calls of despair. To be an animal would be easier than to be a man in our country now.

Compulsory Voting

A Federal law, with a $5 fine upon each adult man or woman qualified to vote but not voting in a national or State election would insure four wholesome results: (1) Obtain secret polling participation by the maximum number of this Republic's citizens; (2) abolish huge partisan expenditures of funds received from individuals expecting political favors; (3) provide immediate cash that could properly be devoted to public schools in each State, in the amount thus collected in that State; (4) locally reveal for public information the names of the citizens too indifferent to go to the polls.

With such a law in effect in 1948 the $5 fine would have produced about 240 million dollars, as a maximum.

Modern distractions such as motoring and golfing on election day deprive the country of a large element of its citizens who are in the better educated and better conditioned class. People should be compelled to function as voting citizens.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

China And Greece

IN THE struggle against world communism, China and Greece are two focal points that illustrate the difficulties of the United States' position with startling clarity. They are properly linked together, the big and little, since they are actually one and the same riddle.

Childs

Greece is so small a country that a few hundred million dollars from America can prop up a weak government and prevent the disaster of Communist dictatorship. To date, that is all the American intervention has achieved.

China is so vast and the need is so great that even if tens of billions of dolars had been expended during the past 2½ years, the tragedy, that now seems to be approaching a culmination, might not have been prevented. More material and a more energetic China policy probably only would have sustained the Chiang Kai-Shek government for a longer time.

But back of this process of merely buying time are grim realities that will not be denied. In Greece there is still the opportunity to come to grips with those realities. In this connection an authority with a right to speak has just published a book which gets at the heart of the matter more nearly than anyone else has done to date. Col. C. M. Woodhouse, whose Apple of Discord has been brought out in England, was commander of the allied military mission to the Greek guerilla forces through the war.

COLONEL WOODHOUSE'S opinions cannot be dismissed by the Athens politicians as those of a "red." He is a member of the Conservative Party and in the war's aftermath, he was one of Winston Churchill's chief advisers on Greece. He has gone through the trial and torment of the Greek people for the past seven years and he sees it with the detachment of an expert who nevertheless has a deep feeling for the people themselves.

What emerges from his book, and one can hope it will be published in this country at once, is that the government of Athens is a fiction. With its cabinet crises, its passionate constitutional quarrels, it is an unreal drama that unfolds in a kind of political Shangri-La.

For the problems in Greece, Woodhouse says, "are organic rather than political." While the unreal drama is played out on the Athens stage, a desperately poor and superstitious peasantry is starving to death.

The players in the Athens drama often know less about actual conditions in the provinces than the experts sent to Greece by the United Nations and from this country in connection with United States aid. In cosmopolitan Athens, with its thin gilding of surface wealth, they must shut out the reality if they are to play their parts properly.

United States aid has kept this drama in being. Without it there would in all probability, in Colonel Woodhouse's view, have been first a dictatorship of the right to be followed fairly shortly by a dictatorship of the Communist left.

But American patience and American dollars will not continue forever merely as a prop for things as they are and the unreality of the Athens debating society. The future presents a limited choice.

PERHAPS THE only alternative is to pour in aid on a much larger scale in an effort to revitalize Greece by building TVAs and developing new resources. This is the prescription of several missions that have visited the country.

If we were to do that, and we certainly are not doing it now, then we would have to decide what instruments to work with in Greece.

The answer of the Athens government to starvation, unrest and the encroachments of communism has for the most part been more suppression and that merely feeds the flame of dissension and civil war. Colonel Woodhouse goes a step further in his friendly yet critical analysis of the United States approach to Greece. He writes:

"American opinion still has to make up its mind what it is for in foreign affairs, instead of only what it is against. Anticommunism, unqualified by positive character, has been one of the best allies of the Third International abroad. In viewing the prospects of a conflict between the U. S. S. R. and the U. S. A., Stalin might well rest satisfied in the conviction that the latter would run out of dollars before the former ran out of doctrine."

Here is where the link between China and Greece is close. We will not win the faith of people merely by propping up things as they are.

Buying time is essential, but it is also essential to know what to do with that dearly bought time.

Ford Predicts Fourth Round Wage Boosts

Philadelphia, Nov. 17 (AP). — Henry Ford 2d predicted today the Nation's workers will get a fourth-round wage increase and prices will go up.

Ford

"A new pay boost is inevitable," the president of the Ford Motor Co. told a news conference. "I do not think anything can prevent it."

But the 31-year-old automobile executive, here to inspect his firm's Chester, Pa., plant, added:

"Prices, too, must go up. There is no place else for them to go."

Ford admitted that production has improved "but we haven't got sufficient productivity to reduce prices."

Fears Lowered Wages

"Prices are high today," Ford said, "maybe too high—but we can't lower them without lowering wages and material costs.

"I wish we had a buyer's market today. We're living in a fool's paradise. Unquestionably, prices will go down in a buyer's market."

Price control?

"That won't help. Price control would wreck the Nation—the auto industry included—and ruin the economy.

Ford declared the workingman—"relatively speaking"—is better off today than in 1939 or 1940.

Labor is "hurting itself" by demanding price control, Ford said, adding:

"Not only would it turn the Nation's progress backward, but it is a trend toward socialism. And such a system would be despicable for the United States."

The Taft-Hartley labor law won high praise from Ford.

"From our standpoint there is no part of the Taft-Hartley law that is unworkable. "I don't think it is a bad law. It should be given a fair and lengthy trial before it is changed."

About New Cars

When will cars become plentiful?

"I would guess that it will be a year and a half before that happens," Ford replied. "Then again it might be in six months. Anyway, a customer can usually get a high-priced car today without waiting."

Right now, Ford declared, no radical changes in car design are planned.

"We will produce 1 million cars in 1948, slightly more next year.

"We still have a backlog of 2 million orders, mostly for Fords.

"We have an automatic transmission under development and hope to have it in operation in the not-too-distant future. It will have 50 per cent fewer parts than those now in use today.

"The Supreme Court has given us a go-ahead to return to the car financing business but we don't plan to do it unless competition forces us to.

AFL Votes Permanent Political Unit

Cincinnati, Nov. 17 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor, impressed by what it considered its part in the recent elections, voted today to stay in politics permanently.

Delegates to the sixty-seventh annual convention—sitting as members of "Labor's League for Political Education"—voted to collect 10 cents each from the AFL's nearly 7,500,000 members. The Taft-Hartley Act forbids direct contributions.

The $750,000 collected would finance a proproganda and education drive over the Nation in the next 14 months.

Delegates shouted approval when Secretary-Treasurer George Meany said 172 league-backed candidates were elected to the House and 106 classed as "unfriendly" were defeated.

Merger With CIO Up Again

Nevertheless, 225 members of the House who voted for the Taft-Hartley Act were reelected. Only 218 votes are needed for a majority.

Convention delegates had a busy day with these developments:

1. A new move for merger with the CIO, prompted by cooperation of labor organizations locally in the recent elections. A report of the convention organization committee was approved, calling on leaders to work for consolidation "with new vigor."

2. Marshall Plan Director Paul Hoffman told the AFL the new goal of the European Cooperation Administration was to boost the standard of living in Europe by one third. He said the United States was following "an enlightened form of dollar diplomacy" through the Marshall Plan and said the spirit of recovery in western Europe has been greatly improved since 1946.

Prefer Airlift to Russians

3. Ernest Scharnowski, the German personnel administrator in the United States section of Berlin, called for an open road for freedom—"a road to Berlin." He said Berliners, however, "prefer to be besieged rather than to become prisoners" of the Russians.

4. Cyrus S. Ching, Federal conciliation director, pleaded for the use of strikes only as a last resort, and to "persuade an employer to settle, not to bring the public to its knees."

European recovery has at least started, Hoffman said. ECA had figured on a 10 per cent increase in production in the past year and it turned out to be 12½ per cent, he added.

W. Averell Harriman, ambassador at large in Europe, has been reported slated to take over Hoffman's rule. Hoffman is a Republican, but he said he was sure that partisan politics would not be considered now any more than at the time of the original appointment.

Hoffman was at first noncommital on questioning concerning the World Federation of Trade Unions in which the CIO takes part but the AFL does not.

Judge Refuses To Give Truman Vote in Alabama

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 17 (AP).—A Federal judge refused today to order Alabama's presidential electors to cast their ballots for President Truman.

Judge C. B. Kennamer denied Gov. James E. Folsom's request for a temporary injunction to keep the electors from voting for anyone but Mr. Truman. They are pledged to support Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, who was the States Rights candidate for President.

The judge did not act on other parts of the Governor's suit, but set another hearing for November 30 to consider them. They asked for a permanent injunction, a writ of mandamus to compel the electors to vote for the President, and a declaratory pudgment defining the electors' duties.

In denying the temporary restraining order, Judge Kennamer held that his court does not have any jurisdiction in the elector dispute.

Kayser Reports Slump In Sale of Stockings

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—T. H. Mueller, president of Julius Kayser & Co., producer and distributor of women's hosiery, said today his company is in the midst of a business slump that started in October. Last year's sales were 27 million dollars.

Retail stores have become overstocked with hosiery products and other women's wear, and have stopped buying to a great extent, Mueller told the company's annual meeting. He added that the textile business is "due for a shakeout."

Kayser's general inventory is about one million dollars higher than a year ago, with the bulk of it in nylon raw material, Mueller said.

McGrath Called As Witness in Textron Inquiry

Concord, N. H., Nov. 17 (AP).—United States Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) today said he had called Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath as a witness Monday in a probe of the 125-million-dollar Textron Corporation.

McGrath, a Rhode Island Senator, was listed by Textron President Royal Little as one of three trustees of the Rhode Island Charities Trust. Little testified at an October hearing in Boston that the Rhode Island fund grew from $500 and "some stock" to $4,500,000.

Little added that McGrath was also at one time the director of a former Textron subsidiary.

CIO union leaders charged that Little used charitable trusts for "financial manipulation."

ITU Counsel Calls For Complete New Labor Law

Gerhardt P. Van Arkel, chief counsel of the International Typograhpical Union, yesterday told the Elks Luncheon Club the Taft-Hartley Act should be repealed and "Congress should start from scratch."

Van Arkel, speaking before members of Washington Lodge No. 15 at 919 H st. nw., recommended a complete new labor law without attempts to "patch up" either the old W gner Act or the present law.

He reviewed the effect of current legislation on members of labor unions and called the Taft-Hartley Act "the slave labor act."

Pay Lesser Issue

Union Power Fight Behind Dock Strike

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Higher pay is not the only issue in the paralyzing East Coast longshoreman's strike. Some Government officers here, in fact, consider this usual bone of contention of less importance than two others in bringing about the waterfront work stoppage.

One is a legal tangle resulting from a Supreme Court decision last June. The other is a fight for power within the AFL International Longshoremen's Association.

Except for the judicial decision in the "overtime on overtime" case last summer, many labor experts believe the employers and the union would have got together long ago.

That ruling upset a longstanding system of handling overtime, which was and still is satisfactory to both parties. Inability to devise an acceptable substitute helped bring on the deadlock.

Compromise Reached

A compromise on this point as well as wages, however, was agreed to by negotiators both for the union and the New York Shipping Association, employers' representatives. Union President Joseph Ryan issued a statement praising the settlement in which he said that all but three members of the 125-man union negotiating committee had agreed to it.

John J. (Gene) Sampson, however, head of one of the group's most power locals, and a rival of Ryan's, attacked the tentative settlement. He is reported to have been the guiding brain behind the wildcat strikes that followed and the subsequent refusal of locals to ratify that agreement.

Ryan and his supporters then had to join in the strike. While there have been reports that Communists sponsored the wildcats to stop ECA aid to Europe, labor experts here discounted at least the latter point. They regard union politics as being the chief issue, though Commies probably joined Sampson's revolt. The latter is not regarded as a leftwinger.

The overtime on overtime Supreme Court decision has plagued negotiations since they began last July 5. That decision resulted from suits brought by individual longshoremen under the wage and hour law. The court held that in computing overtime wages for more than 40 hours a week, the average of a man's hourly pay rate must be used.

Two Wage Rates

Traditionally, however, labor contracts on the waterfront have provided for two wage rates. One was for day work, or "straight time," and the other for night and weekend work, called "overtime." By contract, men working at night or weekends were paid this "overtime"—time and a half—ate, regardless of how many hours a week they put in.

Under the Supreme Court decision, they would have to be paid time and a half for all hours over 40 weekly. And that time and a half would be based on their average hourly wage. Men working at night, therefore, would get "overtime on overtime."

Actually, owing to the pecular conditions of the stevedoring industry, there would be more complicatons. Men work for several employers, and often continue both day and night loading or unloading a ship.

Employers say the bookkeeping involved in keeping records of the average hours worked by each man would put an "impractical" burden on them.

Union leaders agreed with them, and joined in asking Congress to exempt them from the overtime provisions of the wage and hour law. The Eighth Congress, however, did not act on the proposal.

The compromise agreed to by the union and employer negotiators would have written the provisions of Section 7B1 of the wage-hour law into the contract pending action on the bill by Congress. This permits labor contracts to waive the averaging formula where work in the walkout ran into the millions.

However, coal shipments still were being handled at Hampton Roads, Va., and tankers were busily unloading oil in New York. The ILA also was handling Army cargoes here.

Leftist Influence Discounted

Government observers in Washington discounted the theory advanced in some quarters that left-wing union members were seeking to halt Marshall Plan shipments by the strike.

However, Harry R. Hasselgren, secretary-treasurer of the ILA's Atlantic division, said in Baltimore "there is no doubt the Communists are trying to take adavntage" of the strike.

The ILA has announced it has returned to its demand for a 50 cents-an-hour wage boost. The settlement rejected by the rank-and-file would have raised the day-shift straight-time pay from $1.75 to $1.85 an hour and the night and weekend overtime rate from 2.62½ to $2.77½.

Betty Hynes, Editor, Leaves Estate of $24,000

The late Elizabeth K. "Betty" Hynes, who died here September 14 at the age of 50, left an estate of approximately $24,000, it was revealed yesterday when petition for probate of her will was filed in District Court.

She was society editor of the Washington Times-Herald.

The bulk of the estate will go to her brother, Walter J. Kenny, of 1217 35th st. nw. Included is the property there, valued at $20,000, and $2500 in personalty. There is a $1500 claim against the newspaper for severance pay, according to the court papers.

is held to a 12-hour day, 56-hour week and 1000 hours in 26 weeks.

It would have permitted the old system to continue within those limits, but in practice would have caused trouble over vacations. Men must have worked 1350 hours for one employer to earn a week's vacation—1250 hours under the rejected new agreement. Thus, to avoid paying overtime on overtime employers would undoubtedly attempt to limit individual longshoremen to 1000 hours in any one six-month period, which would cut down vacations.

The rejected agreement also provided for boosting hourly wages from $1.75 to $1.85 for day work, and from $2.625 to $2.775 for night and weekend work. The original union demand was for 50 and 75-cent boosts an hour.

Murray Scorces Red Faction Of CIO at Board's Meeting

Portland, Oreg., Nov 17 (AP).—CIO President Philip Murray made a scorching attack on the pro-Communist minority of the CIO today.

In a five-hour meeting of the 51-man CIO executive board, Murray delivered what some members said was perhaps the strongest language he has ever used against Communist activities in the labor movement.

Murry himself, holding a news conference, neglected to mention the attack, but others who were present told reporters about it privately.

One official quoted Murray as calling Communists "filthy" and "vicious"—and as saying that all CIO union leaders must make a choice between loyalty to the CIO and loyalty to Russian foreign policy.

The CIO's left wing, which has been declining in strength for the last two years, is squarely in the doghouse with Murray just now because the left-wingers departed from CIO policy in two big respects.

They supported Henry Wallace for President and they kept up their attacks on the Marshall plan.

After Murray spoke, other CIO right-wingers (anti-Communists) joined in the attack. One was Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers.

Some of the left-wingers defended themselves. They argued, for example, that the Progressive Party was responsible for the progressive tone of the Democratic platform.

During the board meeting, an internal struggle in the CIO over the issue of alleged "raiding" between unions was discussed without a final decision.

N. Y. Council Fight Delayed

Another internal struggle—over whether to revoke the charter of the left-wing New York City CIO Council—was avoided by the board today, but will come up later and is almost sure to be debated in the convention, which begins here Monday. The board recessed until Saturday.

The resolutions committee will begin work Thursday, headed as usual by Van A. Bittner, director of the CIO Southern organizing drive.

Joe Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, was chosen secretary of the resolutions committee. This was something new. Until this year Lee Pressman had held that important position. Pressman now is no longer the CIO's general counsel, and is not in evidence here.

Steel Nationalization Approved in Commons

London, Nov. 17 (AP).—The House of Commons tonight approved in principle the Labor Government's bill to nationalize the major part of Britain's iron and steel industry. The vote was 373 to 211.

The bill now goes to committee for possible amendments.

It will return then to Commons for final passage before the House of Lords takes it up.

The adverse vote of 211 was the most the opposition has been able to muster against a government measure since the Labor Party won its topheavy majority in the 1945 general election.

Per Capita Tax Boosted by CIO Store Workers

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 17 (AP).—The CIO Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Workers, in closing sessions of their convention here today, acted to strengthen the union's financial position.

The international's per capita tax was increased from 50 cents a month per member, to 60 cents.

A companion administration proposal to set a new minimum for union dues was defeated. The locals contended the action would constitute an infringement on their autonomy.

Genuine . . . Hand Woven Harris Tweed Suits

The Harris tweeds we have purchased from the Islands of Harris and Lewis are hand-woven. All the processes are by hand — or foot — for the fabric is fulled by the bare feet of the Scottish lassies on the floors of their homes.

No synthetic chemical dyes achieve the soft tans, browns, greens and heather shades. These come from the seaweeds, the vetch plants and other natural sources.

So much for the cloth! Then we asked a foremost American tailor to give us some men's suits worthy of these wonderful fabrics. This they have done.

Most important of all, we were able to dent the inflationary spiral and offer you these genuine Harris Tweed Suits at the same price as last year's.

Arlington Recount Sought for Potter

Suit was filed yesterday in Arlington Circuit Court asking for a recount of ballots in the November 2 election in which incumbent County Board Member Alfred E. Frisbie defeated Lee Potter by only 129 votes.

The suit, brought by 20 Arlington residents, claimed "an improper count of the votes received" and cited alleged errors in eight of Arlington's 24 precincts.

Attorneys of record in yesterday's suit were Edgar Pumphrey, chairman of the county GOP committee, and Malcolm D. Miller, chairman of the Better Government League. Among the 20 citizens signing the suit were two members of the GOP committe, Charles W. Carter and Harold F. Hughes.

Among other precinct ballot errors, the suit claims:

(1) That a ballot at Ashton Heights Precinct, marked for Potter, was voided after it was found that one corner was "slightly torn."

(2) That in Columbia Precinct, an "extra shift" of election officials which joined the regular crew long after polls opened had "no known Republicans" among it, contrary to law.

(3) That in Park Lane Precinct, ballots were taken to voters in automobiles outside the polling place, who were then "assisted in the voting of the said ballots."

(4) That in Virginia Highlands Precinct, Election Judge Mrs. Monica Flaherty was observed by a watcher to read off "two Potter votes for Frisbie."

Election Board Accused

The suit also declared that the commissioners of election, who reviewed precinct findings, "made a substantial error" in recording the official total vote.

Frisbie, the Democratic candidate, has 10 days in which to reply to the suit. Then sworn statements will be taken from witnesses who claimed the irregularities.

The case will then be reviewed by two Virginia Circuit Court judges appointed by the State Supreme Court of Appeals, plus Arlington Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

Additional chairmen to assist in preparations for inaugural ceremonies for President Truman next January were named by Milvin D. Hildreth, general chairman, yesterday.

Welburn Mayock, general counsel for the Democratic National Committee, has been named vice chairman. Committee chairmen whose appointments were announced yesterday include Harlan Wood, veterans, and Neil Roach, liaison with the Democratic National Committee.

Tickets for the inauguration parade are expected to be put on sale within the next few days, a spokesman for the inauguration committee said yesterday.

Polio Total Hits 249 As Baby Is Stricken

One new District polio case was reported at Children's Hospital yesterday, raising the Greater Washington total for the year to 249. The case was a 1-year-old boy from the 4800 block of 36th st. nw.

The report boosted the District total to 129. The nearby Maryland and Virginia total remains at 120. The total in both areas for this date last year was 55.

Drunk Drivers May Lose Permit 1 Year

Persons convicted of drunken driving here may lose their operator's permits for a year, instead of the present six months, depending on results of a study by District Traffic Director George Keneipp.

Keneipp, together with other members of the Eastern Conference of Motor Vehicle Administrators, yesterday approved a resolution calling for mandatory revocation "for at least one year" of the license of any person convicted of driving while intoxicated.

At conclusion of the one-day session, Keneipp told reporters he had voted for the one-year license revocation, but added that he "hadn't been for it" in the past because "it's difficult to get convictions if the revocation is for one year."

Up to Commissioners

He said the proposed extended revocation time would be "given study in the District." The congressional traffic act, he said, provides at present for six months' license suspension upon court conviction or after forfeiture of collateral on a drunk driving charge.

"It's a matter of policy to be determined by the Commissioners," Keneipp said. Before it gets to them, however, he said he would confer with the Corporation Counsel.

In line with another resolution of the conference, Keneipp announced a program to educate the public on the causes of accidents and traffic fatalities would be undertaken in the District.

The conference listed the principal causes of accidents as: Following too closely, failure to yield the right of way, speeding, failure to keep to the right, making improper turns, and mechanical defects. More rigid enforcement of traffic laws was recommended as well as "public education."

Speed Causes Fatalities

Listed as causing the greatest number of fatalities were excessive speed and driving while under the influence of intoxicants.

Keneipp said these causes would be "publicized widely in a manner to be determined by the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board." He will also turn over to the board a comparative study of accidents here each month, he disclosed.

The conference also okayed a resolution calling upon States not members of the organization to standardize granting of driver's licenses and to deny them to persons under 16.

During a two-week period "around inaugural time," the conference voted to recognize special inauguration license tags which may be issued to prominent officials.

"By golly, you CAN hear the ocean in it!"

Driver Convicted On Right-of-Way Charge in Death

William H. Wendling, 24, a Capital Transit Co. bus operator, was convicted yesterday in Municipal Court on a charge of failing to yield the right of way to a pedestrian in a traffic death October 5 at Wisconsin ave. and Fessenden st. nw.

According to the evidence, his bus struck Miss Mary B. Barbieri, 34, of 4400 Jenifer st. nw., at the crosswalk as he turned the corner. Miss Barbieri was killed almost instantly.

A coroner's jury held Wendling not responsible for the death. Sentencing in the right-of-way case was postponed by Judge Aubrey B. Fennell until November 24.

J. M. Riecks Promoted by School Board

John M. Riecks, an administrative employe of the public schools, yesterday was named associate superintendent of District schools in charge of buildings and grounds.

Riecks

Riecks, who lives at 2067A 38th st. se.; was promoted by the Board of Education from administrative officer of the department of business administration. In that post he was in charge of the purchase and installation of school equipment.

A graduate of Eastern High School, Wilson Teachers College and George Washington University, Riecks formerly was assistant principal of Deal Junior High School and principal of Kramer Junior High School.

The board, at its regular semi-monthly meeting, also granted Hine Junior High School permission to hold assemblies in the Avenue Grand Theater.

The board acted on the recommendation of Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning that the school use the theater after he said that the students have been without a meeting place since their assembly hall was closed last year as a fire hazard.

Vote to Bill Nonresidents

The board voted to send out bills immediately to nonresident students attending District schools. Bills had been withheld while the District Commissioners considered a request of the board that the District auditor take over the billing function.

Representatives of two teacher unions appeared before the board's committee on legislation preceding the regular meeting to ask action on sick leave with pay for teachers. Pay of substitutes now is paid by the teachers.

Miss Agnes Motyka, president of Local 8, and Paul Cooke, president of Local 27 of the American Federaton of Teachers, called for the granting of 10 days of sick leave a year cumulative for an indefinite number of years and five days a year for emergency leave.

Pay of substitutes, they said, should be based on the training of the substitute rather than on the pay of the regular teacher which is the present practice.

In other actions yesterday the board:

Retired Mrs. Emma H. Chambliss, 7701 Eastern ave., Takoma Park, Md., teacher of French and Spanish at McKinley High School, after 31 years of service.

Fairfax Board Will Meet on School Tangle

The Fairfax County Board of Supervisors yesterday agreed to meet with the Falls Church City Council to discuss problems arising from Falls Church's new status as a city.

The immediate reason for calling the meeting is a legal controversy over the county-city school jurisdiction, which is holding up a proposed $7,500,000 school bond issue.

The supervisors have suggested the joint meeting also include the county treasurer, commissioner of revenue, commonwealth's attorney, executive secretary and similar officials from Falls Church.

The meeting probably will be held next week, officials said.

The school bond issue struck a snag on a question of the validity of a special act adopted by the General Assembly in 1942, which provided that Falls Church schools remain under county control even though it became a city.

Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh B. Marsh has questioned whether this provision conflicts with the general State law which gives cities control of their own schools. If the special act is invalid, Marsh said, Falls Church cannot participate in the county bond issue.

In other actions yesterday, Fairfax supervisors:

1. Agreed to request a traffic survey be made to determine whether a traffic light is needed on Route No. 50 at Annandale rd.

2. Granted rezoning for a 500-car drive-in theater on Leesburg Pike, and for a trailer park on Franconia rd., about a half mile south of Route No. 236.

'49 School Outlay In Alexandria Set

Cost of operating Alexandria schools in 1949 will be $1,278,055, the school board announced yesterday.

The budget for this amount, adopted at a closed meeting Tuesday night, must now go to the city council for final approval.

The board will ask the city to appropriate $964,494. The remainder will come from State funds and other sources. The total budget shows an increase of $135,793 over 1948 and an increase of $117,520 asked of the city.

Only changes made by the board in the budget submitted by Supt. T. C. Williams was to raise Williams' salary $200 and to increase from $4000 to $6000 a new item for a man to supervise the school construction program.

Officials Hope To Keep Va. Hospital Open

Alexandria City and hospital officials yesterday declined to divulge details of their discussions on Alexandria Hospital's finances.

After a four-hour joint meeting Tuesday night, R. Samuel Luckett, chairman of the city council's hospital committee, announced: "It was the consensus that the hospital will not close."

The hospital announced last week it must close January 31 unless it finds other sources of revenue. It asked the city for $110,000 in 1949, nearly triple the city's 1948 payments.

Hospital President David S. Haddock said the problem was discussed again at yesterday's meeting of the hospital board of directors. But he would not comment on the nature of the discussion.

Prince Georges Confirms Permit For Kindergarten

Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday confirmed their previous action in granting a permit for operation of a kindergarten at 5204 42d pl. and 4201 Gallatin st., Hyattsville, Md.

Nine residents of the area adjacent to the kindergarten opposed the permit, complaining that the noise of the children interfered with their peace and rest.

Persons favoring the kindergarten pointed out that a parochial school and public school also are located in the area and commercial property dots the nearby section.

Friede Cleared by Gen. Young

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young last night declared he was "satisfied" there was no "deliberate attempt" to limit specifications on a District contract in favor of one firm's products.

The charge followed a protest by the Justice Department antitrust division against awarding a contract for interoffice communications equipment to be installed in the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

District Communications Superintendent Herbert A. Friede, who prepared the technical specifications, admitted he had drawn language for the specifications from the catalog of the local distributor of the Webster Electric Co.

Since the protest, General Young has written to several manufacturers of such equipment asking if their product would meet the Friede specifications. Four of these firms, including the Webster one, replied they could not meet it, General Young reported.

He said apparently the Graybar Electric Co., Inc., 60 Florida ave. ne., Webster's local distributor, had bid in error on the contract since the manufacturer felt the product did not meet specifications.

Rep. Thomas' Ex-Aide Enters Innocent Plea

Miss Helen Campbell, 63, pleaded innocent yesterday on a charge of conspiring with Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) in an alleged employe "kickback" scheme.

Miss Campbell was released under $500 bond by Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court. John R. Fitzpatrick, her court-appointed lawyer, informed the court that Miss Campbell would have to "borrow" any money needed for bond.

She is to stand trial January 10 with Thomas, who was indicted on one count of conspiracy and four counts of fraud.

Miss Campbell, one-time secretary to the New Jersey Congressman, helped him in setting up a system of "paper employes" to the end that the Government paid fraudulently listed sums, the grand jury charged.

Thomas, head of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, when called before the investigating grand jury, refused to testify on grounds that he might incriminate himself. Miss Campbell gave testimony at length, it was reported.

Chicago Man Falls Heir To $600,000

Copenhagen, Denmark, Nov. 17 (AP).—Mrs. Heby P. Hansen, 81-year-old recluse who died in her ramshackle apartment here three months ago, left an estate of three million kroner ($600,000). It appeared today that a dairy plant foreman would inherit the money.

Seaberg

The Danish treasury was about to take over the money when Gunnard Eric Seaberg of Chicago entered a claim, saying he was the only living son of Mrs. Hansen's sister.

(In Chicago Seaberg said yesterday he has been notified he is the sole survivor of Mrs. Hansen and has inherited the $600,000.)

K. A. Haak, Copenhagen attorney who is handling the Hansen estate, said Seaberg seems to be the legitimate heir.

Haak said it has not yet been determined whether Seaberg will be permitted to transfer the money to the United States, but he may have the interest paid in the United States.

New Song Heights Reached By Miss Thebom at Concert

By Paul Hume

Last night's National Symphony concert in Constitution Hall was highlighted by the singing of Blanche Thebom and some excellent orchestra playing.

The program included Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, a Couperin overture, Khatchaturian suite, and Kent Kennan's Night Soliloquy. Thebom added songs by Hugo Wolf and Liszt. The orchestra sounded its best of the current season in both Couperin and Beethoven. The dialogue between violin sections in the early French masterpiece was equaled by the beauty of the winds in their unusual passages. Hans Kindler directed the Milhaud transcription with dignity and awareness of its proper stature.

Beethoven's shortest symphony came off well except in the final movement. Pacing and playing were excellent in the first three, with a beautiful feeling of motion.

Blanche Thebom, who first appeared in Washington with the National Symphony two seasons ago, reinforced the deep impression made at that time. Her voicing of four of the finest songs of Wolf qualifies her as the leading American singer of German Lieder, an honor worthier than its few aspirants would indicate.

Her voice, sounded quite differently in Franz Liszt's episodic scene about Joan of Arc at the stake. Her French diction is as fine as her German, but the method of emission changes so that vowels do not always emerge freely. Her mastery of the psychological mood of the work was subtle and often partook of the mystical.

Kent Kennan's Soliloquy requires a virtuoso flutist of the most skilled variety. Wallace Mann played it rapturously, with pure warm tone, and delicately shaded nuance. Kindler provided him with superb accompaniment, as he did most of Miss Thebom's songs.

The otherwise excellent program drew to a bombastic close with the vapid pap of Khatchaturian's Masquerade.

Soldier Accused Of Attacking Girl Goes on Trial

Pvt. John J. Cook, 19, of Fort McNair, went on trial yesterday in District Court on a charge of having carnal relations with a 15-year-old pupil on the grounds of the McKinley High School here.

The trial is to continue today.

The girl testified that on May 29 Cook visited her at her home and that the assault took place while she accompanied him to a streetcar stop.

She said that when she resisted him, she was knocked unconscious and could not testify as to any carnal relations. However, her bloodstained clothing was put into evidence.

Meyer Koonin, defense attorney, said in his opening statement that he would prove there was no sexual act.

Legion Head Praises Anti-Red Committee

Indianapolis, Nov. 17 (AP).—S. Perry Brown, national commander of the American Legion, said today the work of the House Committee on Un-American Activities "is too important to the future security of our country to have it interrupted."

Brown said in a statement that the committee has "rendered a tremendous service in arousing the American people to the extent of Communist infiltrations in this country."

"We have barely scratched the surface in this red inquiry," he said.

Filmland Muffs A Capital Idea

By Richard L. Coe

MISS LOUISE HACHMEISTER, who's bossed the White House switchboard since FDR's first term, doesn't pretend to be a movie critic, but I put the diplomatic lady on the spot yesterday when I asked her what she thought of Keith's new picture.

This is a Deanna Durbin film called "For the Love of Mary," to which title Keith's is adding in even larger type, WASHINGTON GIRL, without the quote marks. It's all about the wonderful things that happen to a lass who jangles the phone bells at 1600 Pennsylvania ave.

Miss Hachmeister had beaten me to the picture, something that seldom happens, she confessed, because her job doesn't allow much time for movie-going. I asked her what she thought of the luuuuvely things that happen to Deanna in the room where Miss Hachmeister spends so much time.

"It's far-fetched switchboard work," said the lady, "but then the movies always are far-fetched. I suppose, though, the human interest in it is pretty good."

Which is a far better nutshell critique of the film than the diplomatic phone girl to the great suspected. For Deanna's latest does have a good idea to start with, which under a slick director such as Preston Sturges or the late Lubitsch might have developed into the frolicsome movie Scenarist Oscar Brodney evidently had in mind. But it lacks the light touch and emerges as just one more silly misconception of our town.

"FOR THE LOVE OF MARY." Universal-International release produced by Robert Arthur. Screen play by Oscar Brodney. Photographed by William Daniels. Music arranged by Frank Skinner. Directed by Frederick De Cordova. At Keith's.

THE CAST

Mary Peppertree	Deanna Durbin
Lieut. Tom Farrington	Edmond O'Brien
David Paxton	Don Taylor
Phillip Manning	Jeffrey Lynn
Harvey Elwood	Ray Collins
Gustav Heindel	Hugo Haas
Justice Peabody	Harry Davenport
Timothy Peppertree	Griff Barnett
Miss Harkness	Katharine Alexander
Justice Van Sloan	James Todd
Admiral Walton	Morris Ankrum
Samuel Litchfield	Frank Conroy
Igor	Leon Belasco
Bertha	Louise Beavers
Justice Williams	Raymond Greenleaf
Justice Hastings	Charles Meredith

Justices Might Sue!

You're asked to believe that:

Deanna was the joy of the Supreme Court justices, but moved down to the White House switchboard to get away from a justice's assistant named Phil. Like all Supreme Court justice's assistants named Phil, this is a pretty nice guy and you wonder why Deanna pffted with him.

The justices all miss Deanna so much they practically swamp the White House board with calls and Maryhayworthian advice. You never saw such weary types as those judges, all of whom like nothing better than to gather round a piano and sing "Moonlight Bay," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" and "Kathleen." If ever the Supreme Court had a case against Hollywood, this is it.

The justices spend their off-moments coaching a Viennese restaurant man for his citizenship exams.

Miss Hachmeister or any of her girls tell callers that the White House "egg-rolling is on Easter Sunday."

The mile between the White House and the Capitol steps is just a hop, skip and a jump for a gal with a lunch basket.

Anybody in Washington could say to anyone else: "We're expecting you to go to the opera with us tomorrow night." (Which reminds me: Let's all go down and burn Constitution Hall.)

One White Collar Gal

Deanna is the only white collar girl in Washington; that three reasonably young men (Edmond O'Brien, Don Taylor and Jeffrey Lynn) are scrapping for the privilege of squiring this lone female anywhere, and that all the older men are pushing the idea.

These are just a few of the things that will make a real Washingtonian squirm; all of them plus a reasonably good idea for a satire on governmental red tape would be acceptable if they were handled lightly, but West Coast solemnity is all over the place and the notion hasn't a chance.

I'm rather sorry about all this because not only do I think there was an idea for a picture in "For the Love of Mary," but also because here's one more picture which, through the magic of camera reflection ("A picture doesn't lie") suggests a town that simply doesn't exist.

Apart from how Rossini would enjoy hearing a soprano version of his baritone's "Largo al Factotum," the real trouble with "For the Love of Mary' is that its more dull than otherwise.

THE HOWARD PLAYERS, acting in their small theater on the Howard University campus, are playing Ibsen's "The Wild Duck" in a run to end Saturday evening. . . . Ibsen's drama, so influential in its day, has paled with the years, as recent professional revivals have shown . . . The virtues of the present production are Dr. Anne Cooke's resourceful use of a small stage, outstanding performances from James W. Butcher, jr. (who also designed the settings) and Robert Brown, and good support from Charles White, Geraldine Haywood and Marylin Berry . . . Butcher's Mr. Werle is notable for professional ease and Brown, as his son, is an assured young actor.

THE INSTITUTE of Contemporary Arts is in action with a bang . . . W. H. Auden, the "Ascent of F-6" man, will give readings from his poetry, including "Oratorio," Saturday night at 8:30 at Cafritz Auditorium, 16th and Q sts.; reservations from ICA headquarters, 1322 New York ave., or STirling 6268 . . . The preceding evening on its own home grounds, the group will revive "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," the Rudolph Valentino picture . . . And Sunday, December 12, the group will join the Baltimore Museum of Art in presenting a dance recital by Valerie Bettis, the surprise hit of "Inside U. S. A.," in Baltimore . . . Why not here? . . . There's no suitable spot for a dance recital . . Silly, isn't it?

THE CLARE TREE MAJOR Children's Theater tees off Saturday morning at Alexandria's Virginia Theater in Hans Christian Andersen's "The Snow Queen." . . . Under sponsorship of the Children's Museum of Washington, this will be Mrs. Major's seventeenth Washington season . . . The move in locale, as explained several weeks ago, is necessitated by an up in rental for Lisner Auditorium . . . But bus arrangements direct from downtown to Alexandria and return have been arranged . . . Further details at Wisconsin 6823.

FRIDAY NIGHT brings two special events . . . Jacques Cartier in his one-man "Theater Cavalcade" at the Mayflower's Sapphire Room at 8:15 as part of the Charles Carroll Forum series; tickets at the door . . . And Ernest Tubb, "The Texas Troubador," will join the Gay Time hill folk at Turner's Arena for the second in the new Friday night series.

RECOGNIZE THE SETTING? It's the Washington Monument and the Jefferson Memorial in the background of Deanna Durbin and Don Taylor in "For the Love of Mary," or, by its alternative local title, "Washington Girl." Deanna plays a White House switchboard girl who creates no end of a high policy pother in the new film at Keith's

You Can't Tune It Out

Thread of Soap Opera Woven Into Rome Opera's 'Traviata'

WATCHING the Dupont's "La Traviata" gives you the the crocked feeling that though you're hearing your record collection emerge felicitously from your loudspeaker, the radio is also switched on and you're listening to one of those endless soap operas.

This is accomplished by the latest effort to put opera on celluloid. The technique involves hearing the singers of the Rome Opera in the principal arias and choruses, but getting the story in a running commentary from someone reading a diary. The music is sung in Italian, the words are spoken in Lesley Woods' Mayfair English and the story is framed with a prologue and epilogue depicting Dumas fils chatting with Composer Verdi over the Parisian grave of the lady whose life inspired the story.

The result is not a success.

Unnecessary Framework

The reason for the failure is that they've made the whole business of serving opera on celluloid needlessly involved. To get the immortal Verdi score, it's necessary to exist through a panegyric about the lady who inspired Dumas to write "Camille." Alphonsine Plessis, whose grave is one of the things romantic visitors to Paris enjoy visiting.

The interesting feature of the real-life Mlle. Plessis is that Dumas' "Camille" vehicle has made her so respectable. However heartrending the lady's bronchial and romantic difficulties, the fact remains her source of livelihood would still keep her out of the very houses on whose bookshelves "Camille" holds an honored place and in whose record libraries "La Traviata" takes cherished space. Hence this tawdry frame that surrounds the story simply disrupts the romantic air of the whole.

Nor does it help matters to have her adventures relived through her neat diary. This "I-remmberwoe-woe-woe" tone is exactly the sort of thing which occupies so many quarter-hours of today's radio.

It's the Music That Counts

The music, though, does remain the delight it has always been and the tunes tinkle pleasantly through one's mind hours later. Getting opera straight from the screen still seems the most logical way of doing it, despite even such gallant efforts as Miss Durbin's at Keith's to push the robust "Largo al Factotum" into soprano register.

Nelly Corradi is the Violetta, evidently a prized possession of the Rome Opera. The voices have been recorded separately and the technique on occasion is all too evident. Gino Mattera is the younger Germont, a handsome young tenor who might be called the Nino Martini of his day. Hector Panizza conducts and the music throughout gets knowing, authoritative treatment.

If it's "Traviata" you want to hear, this is it, but don't say you weren't warned about the soap opera approach.

Inertia Is First Pitfall for Yule Cards

By Ollie Atkins

YOUR biggest headache if you are planning to send out photographic Christmas greetings this year will be the simple and plain task of getting around to doing them.

Every year I hear the same old story about getting the Yuletide greetings processed and ready for mailing. It's in all the newspapers and magazines. Your camera shop puts in special window displays. Salesmen rap on your door and unfold sample cases of regular Christmas card selections, then walk away reluctantly when you explain you produce your own.

If you are like this writer and every friend he can ever recall, the day before Christmas will not find you sampling the neighbor's eggnog but up to the elbows in the hypo tank with a cross-patch spouse looking-on with dagger eyes. Due to the efficiency of the Postoffice Department most of our greetings will arrive before New Year's Eve.

All this prodding to make you get busy on those photo Christmas cards may sound as if the whole thing is a chore. It will not be if you get busy on it now. Go down to your camera shop and look over the growing masks, get one, buy enough printing paper and be sure to get envelopes to fit at the same time. Do this and half your worries are over.

Maybe you do not have a home darkroom but have a good snapshot you would like to have on your Christmas card. Get it down to your regular photo finisher and he will make any number of cards for you with envelopes to match quickly and inexpensively. Be sure you bring the negative, if you still have it, for the best reproduction of the picture on your cards.

One thing I would like to make clear is that no matter how inexperienced in picture-making you may be you can have a photo greeting card this year. No purchased cards will be more truly personal or appropriate to the season than a picture of you or one you have made of members of your family, the old homestead or just a good pictorial scene.

If you are planning to do your own darkroom work I suggest you write to the Sales Service Division, Eastman Kodak Co., 343 State st., Rochester 4, N. Y., and ask for a copy of "Photographic Greeting Cards. The informative booklet is gratis.

Dime store props served to make this Yuletide greeting scene which may be your answer for a suitable picture if the family album has not produced anything of note in the past year

FORMATION of a council of Washington Camera Clubs was announced today by Charles Baptie of the National Photographic Society. One session representing about 6 of the 15 recognized camera groups in this city has already met to make plans for the International Salon of Photography to be held here next summer. A second session is slated for December 7 at the Mercury Press offices, 339 Green ct. nw., at 8 p. m.

Election year caught the White House photographers with their famous banquet at the Statler honoring the President coming at a very bad time. Prior affairs had been in November but this month would see official Washington in turmoil whether either the Democrats or Republicans won the election. It was the logical time to change the annual affair to a wintertime date. If President Truman had lost, the cameramen had planned to put on a special private dinner for the First Family and the lensmen with their wives to honor the man who has given the American photographers their best break in White House history.

Walter Edwards of the National Geographic Society, John Leeper of the Corcoran Art Gallery and this writer will be judges of the annual salon of the National Photographic Society on Saturday. The selected pictures will be displayel in the Natural History Building of the Smithsonian Institution during the entire month of December.

Tomorrow at 8 p. m. the photographic seminar of the USDA Graduate School will meet in room 5065, South Agriculture Building.

Currently on display at the U. S. National Museum of the Smithsonian Institution is an exhibition of pictorial photographs by Frank E. Fuller of Bloomington, Ill. The exhibit will continue through November 30.

Don't forget to get your Graflex salon prints in before their closing deadline December 1. Entry blanks are at all camera stores.

Besides portraiture and general pictorial pictures, architectural photographs will be judged at the monthly print competition of the Fotocraft Club meeting at 8 p. m. tonight in the Twelfth Street YMCA, 1816 12th st. nw.

Woman Dies After Falling From Taxicab

A 25-year-old woman died yesterday in Emergency Hospital after receiving a fractured skull in a fall from a moving taxicab Tuesday night.

Police last night were unable to completely identify the woman, who was first listed as Mrs. Grace Skarvonnes of 1925 Biltmore st. nw.

George Skarvonnes, 30, of that address, was also in the cab. Skarvonnes was released under $1000 bond.

Clifford Crawford, 23, of 200 11th st. se., driver of the cab was booked on a technical charge and released.

Crawford told police he picked up the couple at Wisconsin ave. and Macomb st. nw. about 10:30 p. m. He said the woman had a "bump on the side of her head."

Fell to Street After Drinking

Police said she fell to the street on leaving a restaurant near there where she and Skarvonnes had been drinking.

The cabbie said he heard a "clicking noise" while driving in the 2400 block of Calvert st. He said he glanced in the rear-view mirror to learn that the woman had slipped out.

Skarvonnes, an employe of the claims department of the General Accounting Office, told police he first met the woman in July and that they had been living together since last month.

Woman Married Twice

Until two weeks ago, he said, she was employed as a waitress at the Gold Key Club, where he first met her.

She had been married twice, to men named "Evans" and "Roy," he said, but he did not know if she was using either of these names.

Sergeant Emmet Waters and Pvt. Horace Carmichael, Accident Investigation Unit investigators, are attempting to locate her mother, who is believed to be in Minneapolis.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coronor, said an autopsy would be performed today.

Soldiers Seized in Robberies

Three soldiers in Fort Myer's ceremonial drill unit, named by police as members of a seven-man gang wanted for a series of assaults and robberies in the District and nearby States, were arrested yesterday.

Police reported that four victims lost two taxicabs, $55 in cash and two watches in the alleged robberies within the past few months.

Police said four more soldiers are expected to be apprehended by Army authorities shortly. The three arrested yesterday were spotted by their alleged victims in a special line-up at Fort Myer Tuesday.

Worked in Pairs

The men usually worked in pairs, and in one instance, Louis Grasso, 1232 Meigs pl. se., was so viciously assaulted he was hospitalized for a month, according to police.

Pvts. Michael Vichio, 19, and John J. McCabe, 18, are being held in Rockville jail, charged with assaulting and robbing Grasso on July 30. He was robbed of his watch, 75 cents and his taxicab, police said. Bond was set at $5000 each for appearance of the pair at 10:30 a. m. Monday in Bethesda Police Court.

The third soldier, Pvt. Arthur J. Mansur, 19, was turned over to Virginia State police for investigation.

Another victim was Merritt B. Moore of the New Colonial Hotel, who police said was beaten and robbed of $35, his watch and cab on Route 1, about a mile south of Alexandria, on July 27.

Herbert S. Marine, 508 Mansfield rd., Silver Spring, was assaulted and robbed of $19 on November 6 at Pennsylvania ave. and 4th st. nw., police said.

Victim Made Escape

The fourth victim, according to police, was Bernard B. Blandford, 919 B st. ne. He was allegedly assaulted November 14 on Memorial Bridge, but abandoned his cab and escaped.

Blandford told police he had taken two passengers to Fort Myer, where they changed from Army to civilian clothes, and was returning them to the District when the assault occurred.

Yesterday's arrests were made through the combined efforts of the Metropolitan Robbery Squad, Park Police, Montgomery County Police and the Army's Criminal Investigation Unit.

Police said they picked up a suspect on information from Blandford. The suspect implicated the other two soldiers arrested, and they in turn named the remaining four, who are now being sought, police reported.

Bat Slayer To Face Jury

A man who fatally injured another with a baseball bat was held for action of the grand jury yesterday and another who wielded a fatal brick was exonerated of blame by a coroner's jury.

Bound over to the grand jury was William Warren, 52, of 4819 41st pl. nw., charged by police in the death Sunday of Reuben A. Stewart, 52, of 4825 41st pl. nw. The fatal blow was struck, according to police testimony, during an altercation in Warren's apartment.

Stewart died in Gallinger Hospital shortly after his admission. He suffered a fractured skull and broken leg, according to Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner.

The jury cleared Norval S. Reid, 25, of 5316 C st. se., of responsibility in the death, Tuesday night, of Julian Jackson, 25, of 5314 C st. se. It ruled the fatality justifiable homicide in self-defense.

Jackson was killed instantly, police said, during a fight in the street outside of Reid's home. The incident occurred, they said, after Jackson intervened in an argument between Reid and a relative of the latter whom Jaekson had brought to Reid's home.

A church supper and bazaar are being held at Aquia Church, Stafford, in connection with the meeting.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Ban on Favoritism In Federal Service Held Major Need

The Federal service would recoup much of its lost prestige if this major reform tentatively approved by the Hoover Commission is enacted into law:

Any Federal official or supervisor who hired or promoted a civil service employe for either political or personal favoritism reasons would be fired from his job.

This sweeping provision now applies to only one agency—the Tennessee Valley Authority. It has worked well at TVA as that agency is closed to both political and personal patronage. After studying the wholesome TVA result, the commission is a good bet to urge both the President and the Congress to extend it to the entire Federal service.

REACTION: It's also a good bet that the petty and indiscreet sniping at the Hoover group will stop now that the President has pledged his cooperation with the 12-man commission which is studying Government reorganization. In fact, the Hoover commission should be given every encouragement possible to bring in suggestions that will lead to a better Government. The realistic politicians will admit that the best Government is the best politics.

PROGRESS is being made in our campaign for a better employe compensation system. Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing is reported ready to tell the AFL convention in Cincinnati that the present system is out-of-date. He will go on record for better treatment of Federal workers who are injured on the job and for equitable payments to the families of employes who are killed in line of duty.

POWER CASE: The mailman today should bring Mrs. John S. Power an unexpected check for $202 from Uncle Sam. This is the story on it:

After the clumsy and sloppy handling of the Power case was exposed here—which caused the President to demand an explanation from Federal agencies—both the Army and VA checked their records on it.

The Army investigation showed that it had pulled another boner on the case; that Mrs. Power should have been paid $202 additional in retirement deductions paid into the Civil Service system by her late husband. It seems the Army failed to credit him with all of his Federal service.

Anyway, the Army showed supersonic speed in authorizing the payment and Civil Service okayed it in a matter of minutes and the check was on its way to the young widow in a matter of hours.

HOLIDAY: Federal employes should take a large grain of salt with those reports that they will be given a four-day holiday during the week President Truman will be inaugurated. They may be given some time off but nothing like four days.

STATE: The first of a series of religious fellowship meetings was held at 8 a. m. yesterday by State Department employes in the agency cafeteria. The speaker was Bishop Angus Dunn. It was decided to hold similar meetings each month.

COMMERCE: It has let out Harry A. Aspinwall, a 41-year-old economic analyst in its Office of International Trade. He was accused of operating a food brokerage business on the side. The department contended he could have used Government information available to him to benefit his business.

POSTOFFICE: The Comptroller General came through with a decision yesterday that will permit the department to continue its policy of paying a 10 per cent differential to postal employes for night work on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. The payments had been held up in many postoffices pending the ruling. William Armbrust, president of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks, argued for the favorable decision.

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS: Arthur A. Gladstone, an attorney, is the fair employment officer for this agency . . . CAPITOL HILL: Francis C. Rosenberger, an attorney for congressional committees, is the editor of a new book "Virginia Reader: A Treasury of Writings From the First Voyage to the Present" . . . JOBS as instructors in radio and electricity are open at the Signal Corps Training Center.

FTC Probe Of Car Sale Profiteering Is Disclosed

Agency's Inquiry Paralleling Macy's Still Open; Local Status Weighed

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A House subcommittee's exposure of auto sales profiteering in Washington developed while the Federal Trade Commission was making a parallel investigation, it was learned yesterday.

FTC officials would not predict what their agency might do about the House subcommittee disclosures that Washington auto buyers paid tips to salesmen for quick delivery of cars, and that large profits were made on some trade-ins.

At the Capitol, John T. M. Reddan, counsel of the House subcommittee in charge of the auto probe, said hearings are scheduled tentatively to continue within the next two weeks.

Inquiry to Continue

"We'll continue this investigation as long as our appropriations and authority last," said Reddan.

He stated there had been no conferences between the subcommittee, headed by Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) and the FTC during the subcommittee's four-month investigation of Washington car sale practices.

He said he understood the FTC had been looking into Washington auto dealings, and said his group would be glad to assist the FTC in any way.

An FTC spokesman said that the agency's inquiry is still open, although results of preliminary siftings have been referred by the FTC investigating officers to the commission itself.

FTC Has Jurisdiction

The FTC does have jurisdiction over trade practices in the District, officials said, although its general jurisdiction over the rest of the country is limited to violations arising in interstate commerce, and does not reach down to strictly local operations.

The FTC spokesman explained the question is now before the commission of whether there has been enough evidence of law violations generally in the automobile business to justify investigation at the level where interstate commerce would be involved.

While that point is pending, he said, some question might be raised if the FTC singled out District dealers for violations of trade laws at the local level.

Law in Question

He said that the practice of tipping for quick delivery of new cars—the House subcommittee disclosed that some salesmen took tips as high as $500 from new-car buyers—had raised a legal question about whether the FTC could hit at such activities with present laws.

Meanwhile, Henry Ford 2d, president of the Ford Motor Co., indicated some support for Chairman Macy's call to the industry to police itself where questionable trade practices are found.

Ford told the Associated Press in Philadelphia that "we know that many dealers are unscrupulous. As long as a dealer has a chance to make easy money, he will. We don't condone the practice, and have fired 23 dealers for black market practices. We'll fire more if we catch them."

Gaming Hearings Continued for Optimist Club

Hearings for two men on charges arising from a "horse race" party held by the Arlington Optimist Club last Wednesday were continued until December yesterday in Fairfax County Trial Justice Court.

A charge of gambling against Optimist William R. Schreck, 2704 Central ave., Alexandria, will be heard December 1. C. K. Vance, proprietor of Hunter's Lodge where the party was raided, will be given a preliminary hearing December 17 on charges of permitting gambling, allowing liquor on the premises and selling beer after hours. Vance pleaded innocent on all counts yesterday.

Schreck, who is chairman of the club's ways and means committee, volunteered to take responsibility for the 300 members at the party, police said. Club officials said the purpose of the game was to raise money for community work.

Food Inspector Named Bureau's Assistant Director

The official lives at 6216 44th ave., Riverdale, Md., with his wife and 6½-year-old son, Richard.

Thieves Get $25,000 Loot At Cleaners

3000 Garments Stolen From Plant In Night Burglary; Loss Is Insured

A District cleaning plant has been robbed of 3000 garments valued at $25,000, police disclosed last night.

Lieut. Aubrey Tolson, head of the general assignment squad, said the large-scale housebreaking took place in the Luna Cleaners plant, 1605 14th st. nw., Monday night or early Tuesday morning.

It is the largest theft of its kind in the memory of police officials.

Tolson said he had assigned three detectives to the case and thought they would reach an early solution.

Paul M. Bonuso, owner of the cleaning plant, said it was ransacked sometime between the closing hour Monday night and 7:30 a. m. Tuesday when the plant was opened by its manager, Almond Chrapaty.

The thieves had done a thorough job. They had walked off with every movable garment, including suits, dresses, coats, sweaters and shirts.

The only garments they left behind were those in the process of being cleaned.

An examination by detectives showed the thieves sawed through an iron bar on a rear window and also forced a lock on the rear window. They had then shattered the dindow and reached through to open an inside lock.

After entering the rear window, they had opened a double door through which they carried the garments, probably in baskets.

Bonuso said the one-story plant was entered by thieves last July, but on that occasion the stolen garments were recovered the following day.

The garments are insured, Bonuso said. He declared that most of the customers were to call for their garments Saturday, so he has asked the insurance company to have adjusters at the plant that day to handle individual claims as they are made.

Driver Jailed After Hitting 3 Parked Cars

A 24-year-old man, who police said sideswiped three parked cars during a wild ride in a stolen automobile without lights, was trapped last night by a police roadblock on Q st. nw.

In pursuit during the 10-minute chase was Charles F. Blanks, 233 Westmond dr., Alexandria, a Veterans Cab driver who kept in communication with police by radio after he first spotted the car at Connecticut and Florida aves. nw.

Wallace Gilbert Johnson, 24, of 2211 L st. nw., was identified as the driver. He is held in the Thirteenth Precinct on three charges of hit-and-run driving, operating a stolen automobile, driving without a District permit and violating a one-way street sign.

Blanks told police that Johnson struck a panel truck parked at 2024 Florida ave. nw, and kept on going. Blanks called the dispatcher on his radio, who called police, and the cabdriver followed the hit-and-run car.

Blanks said Johnson collided with other parked cars at 1633 13th st. and at 1610 13th st. nw.

Police in Scout Car 132 of the Thirteenth Precinct had blocked Q st. nw., at the corner of 13th st. when the car turned into Q st.

Catholic Students Attend Annual Spiritual Retreat

More than 4000 Catholic students in public, junior, senior and vocational high schools yesterday attended the fourteenth annual spiritual retreat, sponsored by the Confraternity of Christsian Doctrine of the Washington Archdiocese.

The students represented schools of the District and Montgomery, Prince Georges, Charles and St. Mary's Counties. Retreats were held in a total of 34 churches and were conducted by 34 priests. Another 34 priests were in charge of arrangements.

The annual retreat will conclude today. Final sessions will begin at 9:30 a. m. and end at 2:30 p. m. At each church, five conferences will be held, along with devotions and recreation, according to the Rev. Joseph E. Cedra, director of the Confraternity.

Neighbors Recall Warnings To 2 Boys Killed in Cave-in

A stunned neighborhood yesterday recalled how two young boys, who lost their lives in the cave-in of a sand and clay bank, had been warned again and again to stay away from the spot.

The two youngsters, John Whalen, 12, of 3232 M st. se., and Francis X. O'Donnell, 10, of 3222 M st. se., were killed Tuesday night when the cave they had dug in the bank along 33d pl. near M st. se. collapsed on them.

"They started digging the cave about a month ago. My parents and I warned them several times that it was dangerous, but we never realized they had dug in so far," said Richard Toomey, 15, who lives nearby at 3326 M st. se. Neighbors estimated the cave ran about 10 feet back into the bank.

The boys had been instructed by their families not to hang around the bank, formed by a cut made in the earth a year ago for a future roadway, it was learned.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, after performing autopsies yesterday, said the O'Donnell boy had died of suffocation, while the Whalen boy had died of internal hemorrhage from a ruptured heart and lung. Death in both instances was a matter of minutes, he said.

He said he will withhold certificates of death until investigations of the tragic accident are completed by police and the corporation counsel's office. Indications are, however, that the deaths will be termed accidental.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton Korman said he had been unable to find any evidence of negligence.

Capt. William Murphy, commanding officer of the Fourteenth Precinct in which the spot is located, said his men were unaware that the cave existed.

A policeman was stationed yesterday afternoon at the spot to keep back the many curious youngsters, who came there after school. The hole will be filled in by the Capitol Mortgage & Title Co., owner of the property, police said.

Some of the O'Donnell boy's classmates, in the fifth grade at the Francis Xavier School, told yesterday how he had described the cave as a "pirates den" to them.

"He said he and another boy played they were pirates and pretended that chuncks of sand were pieces of gold. He said he was going to built up a roof inside so the top wouldn't fall in," said Anthony Busch, 10, of 3747 Minnesota ave. ne., who came with a group of boys to look at the spot.

The Whalen boy was a sixth grade student at Wallach School. It was his aunt and uncle, Sergt. Floyd Dennis and Mrs. Nancy Dennis, who discovered the bank had caved in about 10:15 p. m.

Funeral services for John Whalen will be held Saturday at 2:30 p. m. at the Lee funeral home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne. Requiem mass will be said for Francis O'Donnell at 9 a. m. Friday at St. Francis Xavier Church, 2806 Pennsylvania ave. se. Both boys will be buried in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Drive Launched For Cathedral Sustaining Fund

A drive to raise $30,000 in the Washington area for a sustaining fund for the Washington Cathedral was launched yesterday.

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, spoke at a luncheon at the Cathedral launching the drive. He pointed out that the Cathedral must raise $75,000 annually for operating costs. Unlike a parish church, it cannot depend upon fixed financial support, and it receives no funds from the diocese.

Persons outside of the diocese contribute $45,000 annually to the support of the church and the rest must come from residents of Washington.

E. R. Finkenstaedt was named chairman of the three-week drive and Mrs. James M. Barnes co-chairman. Team captains named at the meeting were William J. Flather, jr.; Charles C. Glover, III; Mrs. H. Chapman Rose, Mrs. Leonard Elstad, Mrs. Clifford Folger, Richard H. Taliaferro, Mrs. J. Blaise deSibour, Edwin N. Lewis, G. Bowdoin Craighill, sr., and Mrs. Barnes.

Rent Increase Hearing Today On 285 Units

A hearing on a proposed 10 per cent rent increase on 285 apartments in the 200 to 400 blocks of Orange st. se. and the 2900 block of 2d st. se. will be held today at 9:30 a. m. at District Rent Control Administration headquarters, 1720 Massachusetts ave. nw. Rent Examiner William F. Mansfield will preside.

Meanwhile attorneys for 700 apartment dwellers at McLean Gardens last night asked District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell to make an administrative review of a 6.9 per cent rent increase recommended on 720 apartments there.

The firm of Arnold, Fortas & Porter filed the request after Rent Examiner Denis K. Lane, who made the recommendations, denied a request for reconsideration.

Cogswell already is making an administrative review of Lane's decision on 1300 dormitory rooms. Lane ruled that no change should be made in the present rents and the development owners, the Fairmac Corp., asked for the review. Cogswell will consider the matters jointly, he said.

Red Signals To Flash at Bad Crossings

City Heads Approve New Traffic Lights For 1 to 6 A. M.

District Commissioners have approved rapid-flashing red traffic signals for dangerous intersections between 1 and 6 a. m. daily, it was learned last night.

The approval was requested by District Traffic Director George E. Keneipp, who pointed out that such points have had a substantial accident toll, and are presently unprotected.

On many corners, major crossings are protected by traffic lights, which are turned off at 1 a. m. Minor cross streets, however, have stop signs, which remain in effect throughout the night.

Prior to World War II, the majority of major crossing signals were arranged to flash an amber light, advising caution, after the regular red and green light sequence was halted in the low traffic period. Such flashing was disconnected during the war because of blackout requirements.

Now the traffic officials will institute flashing red signals, which require a complete stop, on the heavily traveled cross streets for early-hour traffic. Ten such signals are already in operation.

The Commissioners have approved a policy declaring that all new controllers purchased during the fiscal year 1949, which began July 1, shall have the red flashing signal connections and those to be purchased under the controller replacement program shall include the equipment.

First new controllers purchased with the flashing device will be placed on 13th st. nw., between Euclid st. and Missouri ave. nw. If they work well there, Keneipp plans to increase their number.

The Traffic Department has asked for $38,000 in the 1950 fiscal budget for the signal sprucing-up program as the start toward a five-year drive.

Under the program for final burial next of kin may elect to have remains returned to the United States for burial or may request interment in a permanent military cemetery overseas.

Montgomery Official Out In Charter Suit Protest

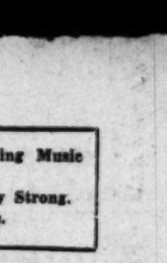
Kelley, Legal Aide To Commissioners, Quits; Committee Planning Battle

By Betty Ruth McDevitt

A Montgomery County official resigned yesterday in protest against action of the county commissioners ordering a suit to block the county's January 6 charter council election.

Other developments were:

Directors of the Montgomery charter committee called a special meeting for 8 p. m. Tuesday in Rockville to plan defense of the new charter.



Kelley

A Charter Committee member predicted that, if allowed to stand, the county commissioners' action would deprive the county of home rule until 1950.

The County Republican State Central Committee disclaimed all responsibility for the commissioners' action, asserting it was a move of the commission's Republican majority "as individuals" and not as party members.

Suit Being Prepared

The commissioners' suit, decided on in a five-minute closed meeting Tuesday, was being prepared by F. Barnard Welsh, counsel for the commissioners, who said he expects to have the action ready within a few days.

The suit, he has indicated, will be based on a provision in the Maryland constitution that county officers shall be elected only at four-year interyals. He announced the action is intended to give the commissioners "the right to serve out their time."

Resigning immediately as assistent counsel to the commissioners was Thomas C. Kelley. He is a member of the county charter committee and supported the charter during the campaign which ended with the charter's adoption in a November referendum. The charter provides for a county manager-council government and home rule.

"Because of my known support of the charter since its inception six years ago," Kelley decared, "it would be impossible for me to continue."

Fears for Home Rule

The prediction that the suit, if upheld, would deprive the county of home rule for two more years was made by Frederic P. Lee, attorney and another charter committee member.

According to Lee, any delay in election of a seven-member county council would, under the charter, leave the county commissioners as interim councilmen.

The commissioners, however, do not have the power under the charter, according to Lee, to enact local laws. And neither would the State Legislature have such power, since the constitution prohibits the Legislature from adopting local laws for any county which has a charter.

Dean James J. Hayden, member of the board which drafted the charter, was confident the January election would be declared valid.

The Republican Central Committee issued its statement after a special meeting in Silver Spring in the office of Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., chairman of the county's legislative delegation.

"The results of the recent election," the statement said, "indicate that a majority of the people want a charter form of government, and it is now the wish of the Republican State Central Committee to cooperate in securing the best possible council."

The committee said it would refrain from making any suggestions as to council candidates, fearing any such action "would be misinterpreted as an injection of partisan politics into the coming election."

SEC Is Asked To Relax Rules On Short Sales

The Securities and Exchange Commission is studying recommendations by the New York Stock Exchange that it relax regulations on short selling and floor trading.

An SEC spokesman said yesterday that both the proposals are in the "discussion stage." He would make no guess as to when the commission might act on them.

The stock exchange proposed:

1. Relaxation of SEC regulations on short selling so that a trader could sell a stock he does not own when the price of that stock is dropping.

2. Relaxation of stock exchange regulations to enable a trader to buy a given stock on the floor one day and sell it the next. Present rules require a two-day time lapse in such deals.

The commission spokesman said that the exchange made 20 proposals altogether—most of them minor—but those involving short selling and floor trading are the ones now under consideration.

North American Co. Reports Drop in Net

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—North American Co. reported today earnings for the year ended September 30 of $11,335,303, equal to $1.32 a share, compared with $15,996,567, or $1.87 a share, the previous year. The report, covering the parent company only, said the reduction in earnings resulted from subsidiary divestments under the Utilities Holding Company Act.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 17 (AP).—Heavy buying from mills sent wheat up to a new post-election high today. Most other grains also firmed, although the lightly traded rye deliveries slumped. Soybeans were mixed and lard easy.

Most of the strength was centered in wheat, with corn and oats tagging along. A strong demand for flour from domestic bakers caused mills to enter the wheat market. Their buying represented lifting of hedges in wheat against these sales of flour.

The advance met a good deal of selling, creating an active trade. But most of the offers apparently came from longs who had profits. Dealers said there was not much hedge selling, which would have indicated an increase in the country movement of cash wheat.

Wheat closed ⅛-¼ higher, corn was ⅝ to 1 cent higher, oats were ¼-⅜ higher, rye was 1¼-1½ lower, soybeans were ½ lower to 1½ higher and lard was unchanged to 20 cents a hundred pounds lower.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Cotton futures were steady today in moderately active dealings. Prices declined in early trading as hedge selling was attracted with nearby deliveries about 1 cent a pound above the Government loan price basis at Memphis. Buying for mill and export account later rallied prices, with final levels 20 to 40 cents a bale higher. Shippers covered purchases partly against previous sales of cotton to England.

Wilson 'Ringer' Says 2 Teammates Knew Identity

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

OF COURSE it's only money, but the $60,000 or thereabouts that the New York Yankees deposited to the account of young Paul Hinrich for the pleasure of getting his name on a baseball contract calls at least for one slightly arched eyebrow.

POVICH

Hinrich is a 23-year-old kid who pitched for Dallas last season and was the property of the Detroit Tigers until Commissioner A. B. Chandler smelled out something messy and declared him a free agent, along with nine other Detroit farm hands. The Yankees treed the boy at Concordia Seminary in St. Louis where he studies for the ministry and sold him on the advantages of New York.

The Yanks didn't divulge the exact amount of moola required to wean Hinrich from the talons of 12 other major league clubs waving certified checks beneath his sensitive nostrils but the $60,000 tag is a fair estimate. The White Sox yesterday disclosed that their own unsuccessful bid for the boy was $60,000 and it is doubtful if he went to the Yankees as a marked-down item.

In any event it's another manifestation of the fast-with-a-buck policy of major league teams revelling in their bloated club treasuries in these times of record gate receipts.

HINRICH WASN'T any big shot pitching star, even in the Texas League. He won only nine games and lost eight in competition two cuts below the majors, yet the frantic bidfest for him. By this time, it was assumed, apparently erroneously, that they had been burned enough on their bonus-player investments to slow down but that hasn't happened.

There was an object lesson for the major league clubs in the recent minor league draft lists. Early in 1948, the rich Phillies with their duPont backing, bowled over every other club's bird dogs and beat them to a young Georgia schoolboy named Hugh Radcliffe. They paid Radcliffe a $40,000 bonus and took him home, later farming him out to Wilmington and Toronto. Any club could have claimed him last week for $10,000, but they were disenchanted and none did.

Unclaimed on that same minor league draft list was another kid pitcher, George Zoeterman, who was the object of a bidfest last winter after the Chicago White Sox were all but thrown out of the league for signing him before he graduated from high school. The Cubs finally landed him and at the end of the season he was up for sale for $10,000 with no takers.

A YEAR AGO, the Phillies won the rat-race to sign Curt Simmons, the Egypt, Pa., schoolboy on whose doorstep a dozen major league scouts camped. The Phillies' representatives walked away triumphant with a contract and the boy had a $65,000 bonus to start him off in life in the big leagues. He was the National League's most over-paid pitcher last season, with a mere 7 wins and 13 defeats.

Simmons had been pitching for high school and town teams around Egypt, Pa., Lebanon, Pa., and Bethlehem, Pa., and was a ball of fire in that Arab league, but major league hitters weren't awed, apparently. The Phillies came up with a better prospect in Robin Roberts, a Michigan schoolboy, who won seven and lost only nine, but that figure hardly justifies the $25,000 bonus they paid him.

The Pirates made a better deal for themselves. They skipped the schoolboy phenoms and bought Bob Chesnes, from the San Francisco Club. They paid a whopping price of $100,000 for him, but at least he had been a big winner in the AAA Pacific Coast League and apparently knew how to pitch. The 14 games he won for the Pirates against only six defeats seemingly justified the deal.

AND LOOK WHAT happened to the Boston Braves. They had an army of scouts camped on the trail of an up-State New York kid named John Antonelli, who was a pitcher. The Braves' people talked to the boy, played footsie with his dad, and joyfully separated themselves from $75,000 to sign him. He reported to the Braves with no preliminaries and they were thus enjoined from farming him out.

So what happened? Antonelli didn't start a ball game for the Braves all year. During the 154-game season, he pitched a total of exactly three innings. Apparently he impressed nobody and the Braves couldn't send him out for seasoning without the risk of losing him. Their $75,000 investment was a dud. Their scouts who signed him, went on a fool's errand apparently.

And the good journeymen ball players of the Braves who won a pennant for the club and couldn't make in five years what the rookie got as a bonus, didn't like it to the extent of cutting him out of a World Series share. Commissioner Chandler finally voted the boy $300, but it pointed up one more item. Bonus players don't make for no happy families on big league clubs.

Caps Lace Knicks for 7th Straight Win, 73-62

New York, Nov. 18.—Turning on the pressure after a 16-16 first quarter, the unbeaten Washington Capitols racked up their seventh triumph of the youthful season tonight with a 73-62 victory over the New York Knickerbockers before 3564 at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory. The game was not as close as the score indicated.

The victory enhanced Washington's position atop the Eastern Division in the Basketball Association of America. The rest of the Eastern Division clubs, New York included, are separated from the District pacemakers by a margin of at least three full games.

Hermsen Hertzberg Star

Big Kleggie Hermsen and Sonny Hertzberg paced the Capitols with a dozen points. Hertzberg, picked up from the Knicks last season, got 8 of his 12 in the first couple of minutes he operated in the first half.

Hertzberg put up four shots from the floor and sank them all. That finished him in the field goal department, although he clipped in four foul shots.

Bob Feerick was a point behind the leaders while Fred Scolari got 10. For New York, Carl Braun was the only one who hit for double figures. He obtained 11.

New York fell out of the contention completely when the Knicks managed to cage only three field goals in 21 shots in the third period. The Caps went into the fourth period sitting on a nice comfortable lead of a dozen points and coasted to the finish.

Bivins Opens Old Cut Over Joe Louis' Eye

The Cleveland Negro tried to concentrate his attack upon the injury but Louis kept him away most of the time with left jabs. The injury bled slightly again in the fourth when Bivins connected with another right but at no time was Louis bothered.

The exhibition, with both fighters using 12-ounce gloves, instead of the regulation eight, was devoid of much action until the fifth when Louis suddenly opened up and drove Bivins to cover with a quick succession of lefts and rights.

West's Body Blows in 8th Stop Jackson

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Sonny Boy West, generally conceded to be Washington's best lightweight fighter, proved it at Uline Arena last night by knocking out Stonewall Jackson, the District's No. 2 135-pounder.

The end came after 1 minute and 40 seconds in the eighth round of their scheduled 12-round fight. Each weighed 135 pounds.

Stonewall Staggered

The two youngsters punched it out on even terms for six rounds, but in the seventh the shiftier and classier West moved to the front. He staggered Jackson several times with murderous blasts to the stomach.

Sonny Boy continued his attack to the body and finally sent Jackson down for the first and last time with a crashing smash to the stomach.

Jackson tumbled to the lower rope and remained there helpless as Referee Marty Gallagher counted him out and the crowd of 2470 customers cheered. The fighters split up 50 per cent of the net gate of $3669.54.

Jackson's handlers, who had seen West Penalized in the first and second rounds for low blows, claimed that the climatic punch was also low, but Referee Gallagher ruled out their protests.

West Lands More Blows

It was one of the best fights seen here in months. Both boys were in great condition for the scrap and banged away at each other every moment.

West was presented with the District lightweight championship belt by Goldie Ahearn, who promoted last night's card. Ahearn himself won the District of Columbia title 24 years ago.

Puggy Lyons, 141½, Washington, opened the show by scoring a third-round tko over Slugger White, 143, another local lad.

Ray Aldridge, 137, Portsmouth, Va., stopped Frankie Ball, 140, Washington, in the second round of a four; Don Wagner, 204, Portsmouth, Va., and Ben Harrison, 196½, Washington, boxed to a five-round draw; Julian Keene, 155, Washington, decisioned Artie Bethea, 153, Washington, in the five-round semiwindup.

Miss One Game

Bill Kaiser, Vivian Top Grid Contest

TRYGVE TUVE, 14-year-old Chevy Chase lad who won twice last year and was considered somewhat of an undisputed champion in The Washington Post football contest, has to move over.

William M. Kaiser, a winner last year, duplicated his feat in last week's next-to-last Pick-the-Winners contest.

Kaiser, 31, of 6003 3d st. ne., shares top honors with John T. Vivian, 39, of 1445 Spring rd. nw. Both missed only the Boston College-William and Mary tie and missed the Maryland-North Carolina score by only 8 points.

Kaiser, supply specialist with the Army Transportation Corps, has another claim to being a football prediction specialist. The previous week he was a

Jones Improving After Operation

Atlanta, Nov. 18 (AP).—Bobby Jones, one-time emperior of golf, is reported in "good" condition at Emory University Hospital where he underwent an operation about three week ago.

Jones received an injury to the base of his neck, several years ago. The operation was to relieve pressure. He does not remember receiving the injury.

Who Is D. C.'s Best Back? Davis or Conn

You can count on one hand the number of George Washington-Georgetown revivals that haven't been hard-fought and interesting.

Saturday's eighteenth renewal at Griffith Stadium gives every indication of being the very best. Among other things it brings together the area's two most widely published backs, GW's Andy Davis and Georgetown's Billy Conn.

Freshman Handy Andy, Bo Rowland's one-man gang, has fought his way to national ranking. Playing with an undermanned squad that's taken six beatings in nine starts, Davis somehow has managed to make himself the country's No. 4 back on total offense.

His specialty is passing and the 841 yards he's gained for the Colonials with 59 hits in 130 attempts make him the Nation's twelfth leading passer.

An Iron Man, Too

Add the 297 yards he's picked up on the ground and you find that Davis has accounted for 1138 yards.

Thing that makes him dear to Coach Ro--land's heart is that he's an iron man in the best od-time tradition. Until he missed the second half of the Duke game, Davis, former McKinley Tech star, had played almost 60 minutes of every game on the gruelling GW schedule.

Rowland, a man who doesn't waste words, says, "Andy's the finest boy I ever coached. He's an old-fashioned ballplayer. Davis can pass with any of them, he's a good runner and punter, an excellent blocker and a fine defensive back.

"Most important of all, he's a real team player."

Conn's Average Impressive

Conn, whose absence was sorely felt in the Hoyas' last two games, has been plagued with injuries most of the season. Despite the fact that he played only about 110 minutes in the five games in which he did appear, Billy has amassed a few impressive statistics of his own.

Primarily a runner, he's averaged 4.9 yards per try with 294 yards in 59 carries. In addition to missing the Villanova and NYU games, Conn played only in the first half against Denver and Fordham. Still he's far and away Georgetown's top gainer.

He's not supposed to be a passer but you'd never be convinced by scanning his figures. Conn's completed six of eight passes for 112 yards. Two of them were touchdown passes and that leaves him only one behind Davis.

Tulsa won't believe he can't pass. It was Conn who won that game for Georgetown. Passing for the first time in his football

Gorgeous Wins With Sub Valet

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Gorgeous George, that's his legal name, made his Washington debut a howling success last night at Turner's—even though most of the howls were directed at him.

Georgie didn't mind, though, because his share of the record $4303 wrestling gate added up to something like $1075.80.

The gorgeous one, taunted by a hostile crowd of 2400 and an uncooperative referee named Benny Bortnick, made his triumph a complete one when he pinned Marvin Cercer with a thing called a flying headlock.

Everything went off according to schedule although the boy who discovered gold in them thar bleached blonde locks did spring a new valet, Hugo. The latter replaces Jefferies, who was unceremoniously fired for burning a hole in the $1200 number in George's 88 dressing-gown wardrobe.

Obviously not strusting his new man fully, George wore only a $400 gold sequin covered black velvet affair.

Things were fairly funny until the boys started allegedly wrestling. George came on with the recorded strains of a strained "Pomp and Circumstance." After treating the crowd with all the disdain of a Roman emperor, George eventually went to work.

He works just like any wrestler. The ending had a familiar look, too. Mercer sprang to his feet after being counted out and had to be restrained from tearing at Georgie's pretty curls.

A surprising number of people protested that Mercer was robbed.

Through it all, Gorgeous George remained unperturbed. It was just another $1000 night for him. He retired to his dressing gown, donned a brilliant sports ensemble topped by a turkey red jacket and cream-colored wrap-around polo coat.

Hugo got behind the wheel of his station wagon, one of three motorcars George owns, and the boys were off to a date with a hairdresser.

'I Was Wrong,' Talbert Admits but Contends Others Are Over-Age

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Two of Jack Talbert's Wilson High football teammates knew all the time that he was a McKinley Tech graduate, over-age and using an assumed name.

Talbert, 19, admitted that yesterday after school authorities uncovered his ruse, and Wilson forfeited three of its Interhigh League victories.

"I won't tell who those boys are. They didn't snitch on me," said the star Wilson blocking back.

"But I can tell you this. I'm not the only over-age football player in the Interhigh League. I know of one on Coolidge, and at least five on the other teams. No, I won't tell who they are either," said Talbert.

"I don't tell you all this to justify what I did. I know I was wrong from the beginning. I'm sorriest for the Wilson team which lost three games as the result of my ineligibility. And I apologize to Coach Joe Carlo, who was awfully nice to me," said Talbert.

* * * * * *

Talbert used the name of a neighborhood friend, Ralph Swiggart of 5010 7th pl. nw., to gain admission to Wilson last September. He stated that he was a former Bell Vocational High student, and when school authorities checked, they found a Swiggard had attended Bell, and the records were in order.

With his mother, Mrs. Edith Schaeffer of 908 Quackenbos st. nw., listening to the whole story for the first time, Jack yesterday unraveled it.

"After I graduated from Tech last February, Bugs Thompson, star of the team, and I received athletic scholarships to Clemson," Jack began.

"We went down there and both made the first team in spring practice. But after three months, I felt that I wasn't doing well enough in math. On my vacation, I decided not to return, but to return to high schoo to brush up on my studies.

"Might 'Kid' Me"

"I picked Wilson, and changed my name because all my friends might kid me about going back to school. They all knew I had graduated.

"I chose Ralph's name because he was a friend of mine, and he once told me that he wanted to become a high school football player. But he works at Schneider's Bakery, and couldn't attend much school.

"He didn't know I used his name until the newspaper stories yesterday.

"I took third semester English and algebra at Wilson. I had never taken algebra before. I also took art and music.

"I had no idea of going out for football again when I started at Wilson. But one day, I was passing the ball around with a few members of the team, and they urged me to come out. I refused.

"But then Coach Carlo heard about me being pretty good, and he came around and gave me a pep talk. I agreed to go out for practice, just to keep him off me. But I was sucked in deeper and deeper. Soon, I was a regular, and just couldn't get out of playing.

Tried to Pull Out

"Everything went along smoothly until the Tech game. Then I tried to pull out. But before I could talk to Coach Carlo, the two boys who know about me, talked me out of it.

"I thought that I'd surely be recognized by my own former Tech teammates, but I wasn't. I almost had to laugh in their faces.

"I got away with it. But then the idea struck me that the team might be penalized if I was found

School Board Explains How It Happened

Only by having the parents attend the enrollment of every student could a case like Jack Talbert's have been avoided, said Assistant Superintendent of Schools Norman Nelson yesetrday.

He and Superintendent of Schools Dr. Hobart N. Corning were explaining to the Board of Education how Talbert could graduate from McKinley Tech, enroll at Wilson, star in football, and almost get away with it.

"This is one of the most unusual cases I've ever heard of," said Dr. Corning. "There was no way to prevent it under the present system."

Adelbert W. Lee, member of the board strongly recommended that a new and more thorough system be devised.

No action will be taken against Talbert by the Juvenile Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department. A spokesman for the bureau explained impersonation is a criminal offense, only when it is used to defraud.

Reighaway, St. Elmo, Jr. Winners

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 17.—Eleven ticketholders, nine of them admitting they were mighty lucky, cashed a $2942.80 daily double here this sunny afternoon. The other two said they had "found them in the form sheet."

The big cash pay-off for the popular deuce wager took all the edge off the $10,000 Bowie Breeders' Stake, win by Breckinridge Long's Loraine, an $8.80 shot.

The first five men to cash the big double stuffed their winnings in their pockets and made themselves scarce in the crowd, refusing to talk to the several scribes who were trying to get their names.

An elderly lady walked cautiously up to the information window, presented the winning combination of 11 and 8 and asked to be given a check for the amount. She was willing to tell how she picked the right numbers but she remarked "I can't possibly give you my name. I don't want him to know I was out here."

How She Did It

She said she was riding to the track on the train from Baltimore and saw No. 8 on a telephone pole. Later she spied No. 11. "I decided there and then to back that combination."

The remainder of the tickets were presented during the races that followed. The last of the lucky pasteboards was pushed at the $50 cashier just before the horses broke for the eighth race. The young man remarked, "I left it here all day. I didn't want to bet it back.

The lucky bettors were indebted to Mrs. L. S. Slavitz's Reighaway and Otts Nyberg's St. Elmo Jr., for their success. Reighaway returned $35.80 straight, while St. St. Elmo Jr., paid $150.80 for each $2 ticket.

A $2 parlay would have returned $2814.40.

At Pimlico last Friday, the season's smallest double paid $7.80.

Favorite Finishes Third

Bred by her owner, she finished 3½ lengths in front of Mrs. M. Kautz's Bo Mowlee, sired by Little Beans which sent Alan C. Clarke's Fritz Maisel out to win the same race last year. Two lengths farther back came Mrs. B. S. Campbell's Third Division, the favorite, to be third in the field of 10 2-year-olds foaled in Maryland.

With summer-like weather prevailing, a crowd of 11,000 saw the juvenile test, and backers of Loraine collected at the rate of $8.80 for the usual deuce investment. The filly, a daughter of Challenger II, was clocked in 1:48 3/5 for the mile and a sixteenth.

Loraine was faultlessly handled by Apprentice Clarence Picou. He allowed the filly to settle into stride as Eddie Leonard went to the front to be followed by Gyrfalcon, Third Division and Roundelay.

Loraine was in eighth position entering the back stretch. However, Picou was saving much ground. When the real moves began, Picou sent Loraine up on the inside. Bo Mowlee went to the outside with Eddie Leonard, the pacemaker, and Third Division in the middle. Those two weakened in the final eighth.

Third Division Tires

Bo Mowlee showed in front briefly before Picou shook up Loraine. The filly responded and it was all over but the cashing of win tickets. Bo Mowlee continued gamely, however, and finished with daylight to spare over the tiring Third Division.

Loraine, whose best previous race was a second, earned $7,940 for her sparkling effort.

Who Is D. C.'s Best Back?

life, he threw a 43-yard touchdown toss to End George Benigni and repeated with a 14-yard scoring pass to End Fran Desmond. That pulled the game out, 13-7.

Breakaway Runner

Conn's a breakaway runner of the most dangerous type. He went 75 yards for a touchdown against tough Boston College and on the last play of that game missed the tying touchdown by a foot after a 7-yard advance.

His most thrilling run of the year didn't count. Against Fordham, he started from 3 yards behind his goal line on a twisting, brilliant dash that ended in the Ram end zone. His effort was nullified by an offsides penalty, but it showed what Billy can do in an open field.

Neither of these top backs is indulging in any hard work this week, but word from the Hilltop is that Conn will be ready. Rowland doesn't think Davis is in top shape but says that he will play.

Tar Heels Put 4 on All-Southern

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 17 (U.P.).—Unbeaten but once-tied North Carolina, heading for its climax game with Duke Saturday, today landed four men on the United Press 1948 All-Southern Conference team.

Clemson, only undefeated and untied team in the South, put two men on the first string. So did William and Mary.

Maryland University's Vic Turyn, passing quarterback, was selected in the second team backfield, while Gene Kinney, Terrapin center, was named in the third team line. George Washington's freshman passing ace, Andy Davis was placed in the third team backfield.

Other honors were spread among Wake Forst, Duke and VMI.

The backfield was led by—who else?—Choo Choo Charlie Justice of North Carolina, making the first team for the third straight year and bidding strongly for an All-America berth.

Point for Eagles Sunday

'Skins Acting Like a Bunch Of College Kids in Drills

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

If the Washington Redskins are lambs being led to the slaughter, you'd never guess it by attending this week's practice sessions at Griffith Stadium . . . Before them is Sunday's big argument with the Eagles in Philadelphia, with the eastern lead in the National Football League at stake . . . Behind them is a 45-0 shelling by those same Eagles.

"I never saw pros act so much like college kids," Halfback Bob Nussbaumer said yesterday, then joined in the team's spontaneous rendition of "Hail to the Redskins" in the dressing room . . . A lot of the tougher and older players, who neither appreciate music nor enjoy the Redskins' rallying version of it, caught themselves growling out the silly words . . . "You can bet," said one veteran lineman, "that if we lose Sunday it won't be because we didn't try."

The gates of both Griffith Stadium and Philadelphia's Shibe Park, where Sunday's opponents work out, have been locked all week . . . The Skins' Coach Turk Edwards, asked about his plans for reversing that 45-0 debacle, merely says: "We'll have a little new stuff, but mainly we're depending on hard play. We've got as big and as rough a team as they have. Our team is also better . . ."

From Philadelphia comes word that only 500 of Shibe Park's 37,200 seats remain unsold for Sunday . . . The Eagles also announced yesterday that they'd won the draw for the N.F.L.'s "Bonus Player," in this case probably Charley (Buck) Bednarik, Penn's All-America center . . . Last year the Redskins won and picked Alabama's Harry Gilmer in the lottery which gives one team the choice of any player it wants BEFORE the regular draft allows the teams to draw in order, the lowest drawing first . . .

The Redskins can boast of only one Sammy Baugh to match the passing of Philadelphia's Tommy Thompson, but they're leaning on no less than 10 ball-carriers to match the running of Steve Van Buren and Bosh Pritchard . . . Baugh has completed 112 of his 180 aerials for 1637 yards and 14 touchdowns . . . Dick Poillon leads the scorers with 51 points, with Dick Todd second at 30 . . . Washington's ball-carriers and pass receivers rate in this order:

LEADING BALL CARRIERS

Montpelier Races Set

By Harry De Mawby, Jr.

The Montpelier Hunt Races to be held at Montpelier Station, Orange County, Va., Saturday, is the final event of the Virginia hunt race season.

The fifteenth annual meeting will get under way at 1:15 p. m. with a card of six races scheduled.

The Meadow Woods, about 1½ miles over hurdles for nonwinners of two races in 1947 and 1948, carrying a purse of $700, is listed for the first race.

Following, is the Virginia Plate, a 1-mile contest on the flat for 3-year-olds and up with a purse of $600.

The third and feature attraction of the day will be the running of the $3000 added Noel Laing Steeplechase Handicap over a stiff 2½-mile brush course. It is expected to bring out such well-known stakes stars as Mrs. Stephen Clark, jr.'s, Trough Hill, winner of the Mary Mellon Memorial fixture at last week's Middleburg meeting; Ella G. Widener's Adaptable, recent victor in the $15,000 Manly at Pimlico, and Genancoke, the star of the Rokeby Stable's of Paul Mellon.

The Montpelier Cup 'chase for 3-year-olds—nonwinners of two races, except hurdle, claiming, and hunt races, for a purse of $1200; the Madison Plate, a test for 3-years olds and up over a 1¾-mile hurdle course for $1200, and the Bellvue, about 1¾ miles on the flat for $700, round out the rest of the meetin's well-planned card.

Man Who Barred Gambino to Quit As League Chief

Lexington, Va., Nov. 17 (AP). Col. William Couper of Virginia Military Institute said today he would resign as president of the Southern Conference at the league's annual meeting December 9 in Washington, D. C.

Couper was elected president of the conference in 1946 and was reelected last year at Roanoke, Va. He said "it's time the younger men took over."

Couper said he made his first move toward relinquishing his conference job early this year when he resigned from the VMI athletic council.

"I decided I had been in college athletics long enough," Colonel Couper said. "I played my first game of football for VMI at Washington against Georgetown. Now, it looks as if I'll bow out there.

Among the events which made Cooper's two years "rather hectic was the Lu Gambina case. Just before the start of the current season, Gambino, all-conference at the University of Maryland, was declared ineligible under the three-year rule.

He is expected to be succeeded by Col. Gearey Eppley of Maryland University, vice president of the conference.

Commodores Have Won 5 Straight

Maryland is jumping right out of the frying pan of that 49-20 lacing by North Carolina into a fire lighted by a Vanderbilt football team which is sweeping Dixieland.

Not only are the Commodores the hottest club south of the Truman-Barkley line today, but what makes the situation even worse for the Terps is that the Vanderbilts are pointing for Maryland.

The two teams meet Saturday at Nashville.

Unheralded Maryland journeyed to Nashville last year and ground out a 20-7 victory over a Vandy team ticketed to have an easy time. It was quite a shock to Vanderbilt and the Southeastern Conference.

Disregarded Terps

Maryland wasn't held too highly and Vanderbilt was just beginning to move at the time of the Terp invasion.

They were even talking about bowl games for the Commodores, but the Terps knocked them right out of any postseason notions they entertained.

It was quite a victory for the Terps, one significant enough to send Maryland to the Gator Bowl and leave Vanderbilt at home vowing to get even come 1948.

Maryland goes into the game under virtually the same statistical conditions it met Vandy last year. The Terps had lost only two games—to Duke and Carolina, their only conquerors this year—and 14-point underdogs, the prevailing odds for Saturday's contest.

Vandy was rated the second best club in the Southeastern Conference this year and after a slow start the Commodores are justifying the compliment. They've won their last five straight, rolling to opsided victories over Kentucky, Yale, Auburn, LSU and Marshall. Only Georgia Tech and Alabama have stopped Red Sanders' herd.

RINGER—From Pg. B-5

High 'Ringer' Tells His Story

out. I asked one of my pals if the team would have to forfeit games on account of me.

"I was told that the team would have to forfeit. So last Tuesday I went down to the school's main office to withdraw. While I was there, Mr. Carlo called me down and asked me if I was Talbert. I had to admit that I was," Talbert concluded.

Future Clouded

Jack said his plans for the future aren't clear. "But I have an offer for a football scholarship to a Florida university. If they haven't read the Washington papers, maybe I can still get in," he said.

Jack's mother said that she was completely unaware of Jack's masquerade. He used the "nickname" of Jack at Wilson, so his friends used that name when they called.

Jack's stepfather, Charles Schaeffer, who is a painter, was told that the boy was taking classes at Montgomery Junior College in Bethesda. Mrs. Schaeffer said she was under the impression that Jack was taking postgraduate courses at Wilson High.

She described Jack as a "perfect son," who had better than average marks all during school.

The real Swiggard was taken by surprise at the news. "I didn't know that he used my name, and I'm plenty mad," he said yesterday morning.

But in the afternoon, Swiggard and Talbert met at a Georgia ave. drugstore and laughed when they saw each other. "Why didn't you let me in on all this," asked Swiggard of Talbert.

The two chums of grammar school days spent most of yesterday driving around in Jack's older brother's automobile.

Resemble Each Other

Swiggard said that he had become a bit suspicious a few weeks ago when a friend told him that a "Swiggard" is quite a football player at Wilson.

"He looks just like you," Ralph was told. "He's built like you, and has blond hair like you. You ought to go see him play," Ralph's friend urged.

"I never got a chance to go see," said Ralph.

Swiggard and Talbert do bear a remarkable resemblance to each other. Both are 5 foot, 11, weigh 170 pounds, and have light complexions.

Police Boys Club Lists Bouts Tonight

Police Boys Club No. 2, 1200 U st. nw., will open Washington's 1948-'49 amateur boxing season tonight at 7 p. m. in the club gym. Boxing coach Otis Harris has scheduled 9 bouts featuring a three-round exhibition bout between Eddy Marshal and Edgar Smith. Marshal is the DCAAU 175-pound champion.

Boys from the 12th st. "Y" and the Apollo A. C. will also compete against the Boys Club boxers. There is no admission charge and the public is invited.

Natie Brown, Now 38, Is Fighting Again

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 17 (AP).—Natie Brown, veteran Washington heavyweight, has been signed for 10-round bout Tommy Gomez of Tampa here November 23. Brown, who admits to 38 years, is trying a comeback. Before the war he fought many of the Nations headliners.

He stayed 10 rounds with Joe Louis in one fight, then was kayoed in the fourth round of a second match. He took a decision from Tony Galento, but was knocked out by Tony in another encounter.

'Widgets' Return

Midget Setup Improved for Tonight's Bill

A generally improved set-up and line field of talent will be featured at Uline Arena tonight when indoor midget automobile racing enters its third week with an eight-event program starting at 3:30 o'clock.

Racing Director Tom Lane, confident that this new sport has unlimited possibilities here, is placing riffle boards on the ends to prevent the drivers taking short cuts. He also is widening the track at the turns and reducing the straightaways.

Through popular demand the "widgets," miniature models of midget cars, are being brought back at intermission tonight. These tiny, little machines are raced on cables against time, and one of them averaged 114 miles per hour at Uline's two weeks ago.

Ed (Dutch) Schaefer, the crowd-pleasing daredevil from Floral Park, Long Island, and an outstanding indoor and outdoor little car racing pilot, makes his Uline debut tonight in a light, but speedy, cycle car. He will be entered along with such aces as Mike Joseph, Ernie McCoy, Buddy Powers, Don Gordon, Lee Toran, Charlie Miller, Carl Miller, Vernon Land, Clarence LaRue, Walt Gregory, Vic Sloan and Jim Forte, to mention a few.

Business Men Favor Police Reserve Plan

The Federation of Business Men's Associations last night indorsed the proposed establishment here of an auxiliary police force.

The federation's approval followed a report by Max C. Schwartz, chairman of the police and firemen's affairs committee, on the auxiliary proposal made by Police Chief Robert J. Barrett to District Commissioners.

The reserve police corps would be designed to meet "emergencies" and handle large crowds at public events such as the inauguration, Schwartz reported. The corps would initially include 200 to 250 men, and eventually expand to 1000, he said.

The association also advocated auxiliary uniforms similar to regular police uniforms.

In other actions the association, meeting in the board room of the American Security and Trust Co., 15th and New York ave. nw.:

Approved a recommendation that traffic violators be booked by police on separate arrest books "so that traffic violators are segregated from other (more serious) type violators."

Indorsed the recent official revision of traffic regulations.

Tabled until the next monthly meeting a resolution by Jack Blank, chairman of the traffic committee, to approve proposed transfers of authority of the license revocation board to the office of the traffic director "to insure fair hearings for drivers before their permits are revoked."

Citizens Urge Use Of 2 School Buildings

The Lincoln Civic Association voted last night to repeat its request that two old school buildings be pressed into service to relieve crowded conditions at Cardoza High School.

At the meeting, a reply from Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, was read. He thanked the association for its suggestion that Magruder and Sumner schools, now used for offices, be utilized as Cardozo annexes, but said the plan would be "ineffective and inconvenient."

It was voted to resubmit the suggestion to the Board of Education.

The members also voted to ask the Commissioners to insist on larger collateral in cases of false reports to police and stricter enforcements of the present vagrancy law.

Fahey Praised At Dinner for Work in HOLC

To John H. Fahey, former chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, last night went credit for placing the Home Owners Loan Corporation on a firm financial basis.

Fahey

At a testimonial dinner in Fahey's honor at the Statler Hotel, more than 100 persons from over the United States were told by James Twohy, former governor of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, that:

"Mr. Fahey is largely to be credited with the fact that HOLC is now practically out of the red ink, instead of suffering the huge loses of public funds that were anticipated by Congress at the time it was created."

Speakers and guests included Edward H. Foley, jr., Undersecretary of the Treasury; Ernest T. Trigg, Philadelphia, chairman of the board of the District Federal Home Loan Bank of Pittsburgh; Marriner Eccles, of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System; Raymond J. Foley, administrator, Housing and Home Finance Agency, and William K. Divers, Fahey's successor.

12 Top U. S. Reds Will Go to Trial On January 17

New York, Nov. 17 (AP).—Federal Judge Harold R. Medina today set January 17 for the trial of 12 top Communist Party leaders.

The court rejected defense contentions that "a state of hysteria esists, which is the willful product of the press and radio in a sustained campaign deliberately concocted by those who are hostile to the defendants."

The 12 defendants were indicted on charges they conspired to organize the Communist Party as a group which advocates and teaches overthrow of the Government by force.

United States Attorney John F. X. McGohey said he will proceed to trial on the date set "with or without Mr. Foster."

Lawyer's Loan Deal Loss 'Nondeductible'

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 17 (AP).—A man who took a $15,000 beating when he guaranteed a loan for which stock was put up as collateral has no right to deduct the loss from his State income tax, Attorney General Hall Hammond said today.

"To be deductible," Hammond told the Court of Appeals, "the loss in question must be incurred in the conduct of the taxpayer's trade or business."

Albert J. Fleischmann, Baltimore lawyer, said since he had to pay a tax on profits from underwriting a loan, he should be allowed to deduct the loss he took later when the loan became a bad debt.

"The transaction falls squarely within the established definition of trade or business," he said.

"Legal logic chopping," replied Hammond. Fleischmann "is an attorney by profession and not in the business of guaranteeing loans."

Fleischmann in 1930 guaranteed a $25,630 loan by the First National Bank of Baltimore to a man who put up 1308 shares of an oil burner corporation stock as collateral.

Carolina Baptists Warn Against Klan

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 17 (AP).—South Carolina Baptists adopted a resolution today warning "our people against affiliation with the Ku Klux Klan."

The action, taken at the Baptist State Convention here, also urged enforcement of "the laws against hooded and intimidating organizations."

Voters' League Opposes Md. Income Tax Cut

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 17 (AP).—The Maryland League of Women Voters today resolved to "oppose any reduction in the State income tax rate."

The resolution, in effect, put the league on record in favor of increased rates scheduled to take effect next March.

Delegates at the League's Biennial Legislative Conference voted to condemn as "inflationary" Governor Lane's proposal for keeping the tax at 2 per cent.

Under an act of the 1947 Legislature, the rate is scheduled to rise to 2½ percent when returns on 1948 income are due.

Because of a 20-million-dollar general fund surplus, Lane and the Board of Revenue Estimates have recommended that the General Assembly pass a new law preventing the increased tax.

Mrs. Dwight Partello introduced the resolution. Mrs. James R. Downs of Baltimore, State president, said even though the State seems to have plenty of money, the counties, which receive about a third of income revenues, are still hard up.

One hundred delegates from county chapters were present for the one-day conference.

They voted to support changes in the State child labor law as recommended by the Legislative Council.

Despite Devious Devices

Departing Diplomat Disappointed, Deserted in Dock Disagreement

By Marie McNair

A DISAPPOINTED diplomat sat on the pier in New York the other day, surrounded by 15 trunks, 3 crates, 2 bags and a bike.

He was Antonio Dazzi, looking forward to seeing home again after two years as Attache of the Italian Embassy in Washington.

His luggage was boldly marked "Saturnia." But the Saturnia didn't sail and for all I know Signor Dazzi's household effects are still resting on the dock.

There's no such thing as diplomatic immunity when it comes to dock strikes, as Signor Dazzi has learned. "Diplomats are supposed to have ways and means," remarked the disconsolate attache. However, the only assistance forthcoming was from five taxi drivers who helped unload all his worldly possessions from a truck at the entrance to the pier.

It was a simpler procedure for Mrs. John Davis Lodge, wife of the Connecticut Congressman, when she sailed last week to visit her family in Italy. The resourceful Francesca laughed at the strikers, hoisted her bags herself and landed them safely on deck.

TOWN TOPICS:

Marlene Dietrich, who's even more beautiful off the screen than on, confides to friends that she NEVER worries about anything. That may account for her complete serenity of mind and manner. She doesn't know—doesn't care, how much she weighs, how tall she is or whether she loses or gains in weight.

Holding a glass of champagne in her white hand she gazed reflectively into its bowl. "The bubble's on the champagne," she said, "and that's the way we should go through life. Just as lightly as that."

The biggest crowd the French Embassy has ever known swarmed through the half dozen rooms yesterday for the American Aid to France Bazaar. La Belle Dietrich, who stayed all day, modeled hats, sold aprons and made herself generally useful. At one point the crowd which surrounded her became so great that Mme. Bonnet, wife of the Ambassador, carried her off lest she faint for want of air.

Hard-Working Labor Expert

No Oriental, Cyrus Ching Is a Tall Welsh-Canadian Who Eats So He Can Smoke

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

DURING the current dock strike, Director of the U. S. Mediation and Conciliation Service, 6-foot-5-plus Cyrus S. Ching, hits the front page daily. Besides his waterfront worries, Mr. Ching has two minor troubles—name and pipe! Those who've never seen Mr. Ching in full flesh are prone to believe he's Chinese. His Oriental nomenclature was further confused when he was a member of the China-American Council.

'Scotch and Soda'

THOUGH Cy describes his ancestry as three quarters Scotch, one quarter soda, he's actually Canadian born and his name, of Welsh origin, was originally spelled "Chynge." He journeyed south from Canadian fastnesses at a tender age, briefly conductored a streetcar, became interested in why it ran, developed a passion for puzzling out human relationships, then after many successful business steps was recognized as one of the most sympathetic and expert fixer-uppers in these parts. He happens to own 89 pipes, each one of which he uses on occasion and knows intimately. Not long ago he missed one, fumed until it was found in the pocket of a suit sent to winter storage. The Ching pipes have become so famous that admirers write Mrs. Ching asking for a discard as a souvenir. This is the only method by which Virgie Ching can reduce the growing accumulation.

Relaxes on Sundays

CY CHING claims he eats in order to smoke. He downs a whopping breakfast so he can light up immediately afterward. He takes time out for luncheon, almost invariably a dish of fruit salad, so he can keep puffing all afternoon. He never burns a suit, keeps nerves so placid he appears immune to ulcers and such high-pressure ailments. His first wife died in 1938. A few years later he married the attractive lady who'd been his business assistant since the midthirties. Virgie Ching, who's bright as a button, sometimes has nightmares about longshoremen but dispels gloom by buying rose-colored hats which the conciliator and mediator takes time out to notice. The only way she can get him to relax, on a Sunday, is to keep him in pajamas and dressing gown completely surrounded by pipes. Right now the Chings are at the AFL meeting. They're confident the strike will be settled during the coming week.

Miss Fleeson Talks At Chevy Chase

Since the East and West have different approaches to different situations, we must win the "cold war" in order to prove that ours is the better system, Miss Doris Fleeson, political analyst and columnist for the Star, said yesterday.

Miss Fleeson spoke before members of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase following the luncheon at the clubhouse. Commenting on the election predictions, she said all columnists should have a more humble spirit since November 2.

Man, 58, Ponders Means of Getting Divorce From Blameless Spouse; He Wishes to Marry Younger Widow Whom He Finds More Congenial

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Alice and I have been married 28 years and we have no children. During this period Alice has been a faithful and helpful spouse, and as a result of her helpfulness we own a home that would sell for about $15,000 in the present market.

However, we have grown steadily apart in our social activities, so that our marriage seems devoid of real companionship. Alice has her church work, a rather full program, in a different faith than mine; and I have my professional occupation to take up my days and various recreations for my leisure hours.

Neither of us has ever complained about the other's activities, nor has either tried to influence the other to participate in his.

Bears No Grudge Against His Wife

ABOUT SIX years ago I met Letty, a widow who is now 45—I am 58—and we began a relationship that exists to this date. Our tastes in recreation and enjoyment of life are identical; and furthermore we seem to enjoy doing those things which add to the happiness of the other.

My wife doesn't know about Letty, but I am becoming more and more disgusted with the double-standard situation, which I find very burdensome, both mentally and financially. What I want to do is give Alice all our financial assets, plus an allotment of $50 a month, in exchange for a divorce.

My highest hope is to marry Letty and spend my remaining years with her; and this is not due to any hatred of Alice—I don't hate her—but because of my love and desire for the other woman. And now for the question: is there legal procedure whereby I could take the initiative in getting a divorce by fulfilling the terms of settlement outlined above? A. B.

Man Can't Make Much of a Case

DEAR A. B.: Only a lawyer is qualified to dispense information on legal procedure or legal alternatives in specific cases; but in my opinion, it is highly improbable that you could divorce Alice against her wishes, and make it stick, in any jurisdiction where law and order are held in respect.

My reason for thinking so is simply this: It is the plaintiff, the person with a grievance (real or imaginary), who takes the initiative in divorce action. And to establish grounds for divorce, the plaintiff must prove to the court's satisfaction—with factual evidenced sustained by witnesses—that the defendant, let's say Alice, has been guilty of willfully nefarious or destructive behavior, injurious to the plaintiff's welfare, in the relationship.

And according to information given in your letter, you can't swear to such charges against Alice without making yourself criminally liable for perjury, i. e., falsifying under oath; nor could you, I daresay, induce any mutual acquaintance to testify ill of Alice's character, merely to oblige your desire to be rid of her.

Can't Oust Wife Against Her Will

Moreover, in view of your long-standing liaison with Letty, your wife would have ample evidence, if she saw fit to assemble and exploit it, to nolle such suit and force its withdrawal; and constitute herself successful plaintiff in a counterpetition for separate maintenance, that kept you legally tied and obliged to support her, although a dishonored, discarded husband, if she chose to punish you to that extent.

This I predict because, in general, the aims and ends of common law, at least as applied to ordinary folk, correspond pretty closely to accepted standards of common decency; and these are usually militantly protective of a "blameless" helpmeet's security-claims, rather than sympathetic to the emotional frustrations of an errant spouse, when triangle conflicts are aired in court.

So, for advice, it seems to me your only "out" is to reach a meeting of minds with Alice, if possible, that says divorce on your terms may proceed without contest. But it's up to you to decide whether the game is worth the risk of opening the subject with her. M. H.

Church Women Defer Council Merger

Milwaukee, Nov. 17 (AP).—The United Council of Church Women today deferred action for one year on a proposal to join the National Council of Churches of Christ.

The Council, first of eight interdenominational agencies to consider the merger, decided to refer the matter to local and State councils for a year. The national board then will make a final decision.

Mrs. Harper Sibley, Rochester, N. Y., said there was "a difference of opinion" as to whether the United Council, representing women of 84 Protestant denominations, should join the merger.

"There is no difference in our desire to join the ecumenical (world church cooperation) movement," she added.

Sharing Interesting Jobs

Most of us know that children like to help Mom or Dad with their work. They want to be a real part of the grown-up world and one good way is to do the things that make them feel grown up.

When youngsters first begin to help in the kitchen or at Dad's work bench, they may be quite happy just helping. The little jobs of holding something while father nails it or of putting away the dishes are satisfying. Soon, however, they want to be allowed to do some of the more complicated and interesting things.

In the kitchen, some simple cooking can be entrusted to Susan or Billy. When Dad is making a set of shelves for the house, the youngster interested in helping should be graduated from merely "holding" to some of the measuring, the turning of the screws or other more complicated parts of the job.

At first, parents may find it a bit difficult to permit children to take over the more interesting parts of a job. We know that the youngsters aren't likely to do them so well at first. But such a policy pays dividends in the growth of interest in helping and in the fine sense of "doing" that comes to them.

Zonta Club Donates $100 to Chest

Mrs. Alice Sheldon, president of the Zonta Club, presented a $100 check to the Community Chest representative, Alice Lane, at the weekly luncheon meeting of the club yesterday.

Miss Lane, in discussing her connection with the Community Chest, told club members of her two years of interviewing directors of the Red Feather agencies over her Good Neighbor radio program.

The purpose of the broadcasts, Miss Lane said, was to acquaint listeners with the directors as individuals so they would feel free to present problems to the agencies before they reached the impossible stage.

'Queenie' Sees for Her

Even Blindness Did Not Upset Norine McNichols' Busy Life

By Nicha Soure

Norine McNichols' demonstrations of salesmanship appear just like any other experts'—until you notice there's a seeing-eye dog at her feet.

Only then do you realize that silver-haired Miss McNichols, who visited Washington this week, is blind. She has been sightless for five years, but she hasn't let it upset her career as "sales engineer" for one of the largest chain store organizations in the world.

She Teaches Selling

Having worked for many years as a "sales engineer" (otherwise, one who teaches selling methods and demonstrates features of new merchandise to sales personnel), Miss McNichols could not resign herself to the life of retirement.

Queenie, her seeing-eye dog, marked the only change in her life. Three and a half years ago she got the Boxer and returned to public life. Unusual in that she does not reside in one city with a regular pattern of living, Miss McNichols' work takes her from her home office of Birtman Electrical Co. in Chicago to more than 500 Sears Roebuck stores all over the country, with whom she has the small electrical appliance contract.

To the dogs' 10-word vocabulary, which includes such commands as "come," "sit," "fetch," and "forward," Miss McNichols has added a few of her own to suit her needs. A red cap takes care of her suitcases in traveling and with the command "follow the bags," Queenie takes care of the rest. In a hotel, Queenie knows such commands as "desk," "elevator," and "out." Miss McNichols said, "Once we are shown to our room, Queenie can find it from then on."

Taxis No Problem

When she wants a taxi, Miss Nichols tells Queenie, "taxi," and the dog walks to the curb. Even in shopping Miss McNichols can take care of herself. In a local department store Saturday, she said, "elevator," and the Boxer whisked in and out of the weekend shoppers to his destination.

"The only way Queenie can't help me is in the matching of my hose."

The one difficulty that Miss McNichols has with salesgirls is in their description of the color of a dress. Invariably they say "it is a nice shade of green," to which Miss McNichols replies, "Different people think different shades of green are nice. What shade is it? Is it jade, lettuce, emerald, forest or what?"

Miss McNichols has the very fashionable short haircut, which she keeps short herself. Her hair was fashioned in the shorter length before her blindness, and with the aid of a permanent wave and a pair of scissors, she does her own hair. She also applies her own make-up expertly.

Very color conscious, Miss McNichols tries to harmonize all her clothes to the colors she particularly likes. When interviewed she was wearing a beige suit and brown shirt with jade jewelry. Especially fond of jade, the design on her necklace, peach blossoms and a bird, symbolized contentment.

Seldom 'Sees' Movies

The pair seldom go to the movies since Queenie might get hurt in the hurrying movie crowd. But Miss McNichols does like the theater, which she frequents. Queenie sits in the aisle during the play, but politely arises at intermission to allow people to go out.

They have never been turned out of a restaurant, but Miss McNichols always says to the captain on entering, "This is a seeing-eye dog. Are we permitted in here?"

The dog has never caused her any embarrassment in a restaurant. She might chat after dinner for three hours with friends, but Queenie is no pest. She sits quietly under the table, never moving or begging for food in spite of the tempting dishes which might pass by her.

Since the Boxer's birthday is on Valentine's Day, when she will be 7 years old, a Hollywood artist designed a silver, heart-shaped medallion with the inscription of Queenie for her dog collar. The dog has a "ferocious" face which Miss McNichols hastens to say is the typical "quizzical" look of a Boxer.

Becomes 'Plain Dog'

In a hotel room or at home, Miss McNichols removes the harness and Queenie is "just plain dog." But the minute she picks up the harness, Queenie is alert and "at work."

Since the dog can see colors only as black, white and gray, Queenie is unable to cross the street alone. Miss McNichols must be able to tell by the traffic noises when it is advisable to cross the street. "The only time that a seeing-eye dog will disobey a command is when she judges it unsafe," Miss McNichols said.

"In my work of traveling the country with my seeing-eye dog, I find that I am just as safe as, if not more so, than a person with sight traveling alone."

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post.

Envoy Discusses Feeding, Farming Puzzle in Greece

The problem faced by Greece in trying to feed the overpopulated country without further destroying an already "overworked and overgrazed land" was discussed yesterday by Alexander S. Beinoglou, First Secretary of the Greek Embassy, at a luncheon meeting of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, Capital Division.

There is no short cut to soil conservation, Mr. Beinoglou said, but concluded that Greece would have to work hard and sacrifice large areas to temporary unproductiveness in order to let the land renew itself.

The current military and political situation in Greece was also discussed by the speaker.

Mrs. Willoughby Chesley, president of the club, presided over the meeting, which was held at the YWCA.

Twentieth Century Club to Hold Annual Reception

Birney, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Benjamin Brooks, treasurer, and Mrs. Verner C. Boggs, assistant treasurer. Former presidents of the club will preside at the tea table.

Mrs. Mann Finds Food Shortages Not So Bad at Zoo

Animals who are normally pampered with diets of bananas and oranges got along quite well on carrots and potatoes in Europe during the war, according to Mrs. William Mann, wife of the director of the Washington Zoo, who accompanied her husband on a tour of European zoos last summer.

Addressing the Society of Women Geographers at the home of Mrs. M. W. Stirling yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Mann discussed the problems of zoo-keepers during the war and the rebuilding work they have done since then.

Animals killed in bombings in Munich and Antwerp were often fed to the large meat-eating animals who otherwise got little fresh meat.

Preventing Rust on Cast Iron Range

I have a wood-and-coal kitchen range with a cast-iron top. It rusts every time I clean it with a damp cloth. Do you know anything I could use on the lids to keep it from rusting? M. E. M.

Wiping the top of the warm stove each week with machine oil, stove polish or paraffin should keep it oiled enough to prevent rusting. When it burns off, renew, but be sure the stove is barely warm when you do it.

Recently, I bought a genuine cowhide handbag, black, hand tooled and made in Guatemala. Every time it gets wet, the black color comes off on whatever it touches. Can you suggest a remedy? I tried waxing it, but this seems to wear off and the color continues to bleed. C. E. H.

It is necessary to build up a good protective coating of wax on the bag to prevent the bleeding. Apply the wax very thinly, allow to dry thoroughly and then buff well. Repeat this three or four times. When you notice the wax wearing off, put on another coat. Another suggestion would be to apply a clear plastic coating which is made especially for leathers. Before the coating is applied, the wax now on the bag should be completely removed by applying liquid wax and then rubbing immediately to remove the softened old wax. For further information about the plastic coating, call District 1130.

A bottle of blue ink was spilled on my mahogany desk and it ran down on my grey rug. Some of the mahogany stain and ink made a stain on the rug which I am unable to remove. Also, the metal lugs on the dining room table legs leave rust stains on the grey rug and I have also been unable 'o remove them W. L. J.

I'm afraid I can't hold out much hope to you for completely removing the ink stain from your rug. However, you might try wetting it with water and then, while wet, working white cornmeal or corn starch into the stain. As the cornmeal becomes stained with ink, remove it and work fresh cornmeal into the stain. Continue until no more ink is removable this way. At this stage, you may be able to get out still more ink by washing with liquid shampoo. Pour the shampoo onto the dampened stain, work into a lather and as it becomes soiled remove the lather with damp cloth. Continue this until no more ink is removed. If the stain is still very noticeable after this, then using a bleach is the only remaining solution and this may effect the color of the rug. For a bleach, use a saturated solution of oxalic acid (oxalic acid is poisonous, so handle accordingly). After using the bleach, rinse thoroughly by sponging with clear water. Be sure to test the effect of the oxalic acid on the rug color before applying to the stain.

Possibly the rust stains can be removed by using a rust removal product sold at some drug stores. Follow directions which come with the product you buy.

We are celebrating our silver anniversary soon. There are some things I am not certain about. What kind of entertainment would be proper? I might add that we are having around 50 people in our home. Our house is large, but we would not have room for card tables. We are celebrating on Saturday night. Would it be proper to invite our next door neighbors, whom we have known for six years. E. L. S.

A party in the home where there are 50 guests invited usually takes the form of a tea or a reception with no formal entertainment. You could, if you wished, call upon someone among your close friends talented to give one or two appropriate selections at sometime during the evening. Or, you might be able to arrange to have very soft background music all during the party from a record player. If you do this, be sure to plan in advance which records will be played so that they will be appropriate. Also, arrange to have some one responsible for the machine.

Yes, indeed it would be proper and nice to invite your next door neighbors.

Rival Alumni Plan Grid Party Here

Washington alumni of Stanford University and the University of California are planning a football party for Saturday, when a complete broadcast will be heard of the big game between the two universities.

A gala reception will be held at the Statler Hotel in the South American Room at 4 p. m. that day. All interested alumni are invited to attend to help cheer their favorite team on to victory.

Just Any Book Won't Do As a Gift for Children

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

If you have begun to ponder over the presents you intend to buy for Christmas, this is a good time to browse through the book department or book stores before the crowds become prohibitive of sensible selections.

Buying a book for a child ought to be thoughtful, not a hit or miss affair. Why do children read books, or enjoy having them read to them? Chiefly, for their entertainment value. The fact that a book is "good" for a child, or that some other child adores it, is not conclusive evidence that it is a book for your child.

The reason a parent, lacking an opportunity to read and evaluate books herself, finds it safer to choose one of the classics, is that generations of children have found these books entertaining and delightful

The illustrations in a book often confuse the buyer. If they are big and colorful she may imagine this to be a fine book. Sometimes, it is the case of the tail wagging the dog for the big, flashy illustrations may be carrying a very inferior text and trying to make it palatable to the prospective buyer.

A good book has a good text, quite aside from its illustrations. It will have an appealing theme and be told in a way to emphasize that theme. If it has to do with animals, it will help the child to understand and be more appreciative of them. If it deals with nature it will give the child new eyes with which to see its beauties. If on human beings, it will point up the many ways in which persons differ from each other, yet all are worthy and lovable.

Parents are often fooled by the short, staccato sentences in the text and believe them suitable to children. Children can grasp the meaning of a story if it is meaningful. They do not need to be told it in sentences that are without beauty, merely simple.

Because the average parent cannot read all the books she buys in advance, she should trust to the judgment of the clerk, consult some children's librarian or use check lists of good stories to be had from various sources.

If the love of reading is to be fostered in childhood, each book the child owns should become a dearly loved treasure to be read over and over again. Just any book isn't good enough for that.

Waxed Paper to the Rescue

One mother has found a piece of waxed paper under the child's plate at the table is hardly noticeable and yet saves a great many spots from getting on the tablecloth at this one place. Of course this is only for family meals and when the little one is just beginning to eat at the big table with the family.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Maybe I'll Get a Route Of My Own Some Day

I ran into our circulation director, John Corson, the other day.

"I have a wonderful joke for your column," he announced.

"Fine," I replied. "If it's funny, it's just what I need. Spill it."

"Not so fast," countered the canny Corson. "If I'm going to help you with your work, you're going to have to help me with mine."

"Meaning . . .?"

"Meaning that you've got to sell a subscription to The Washington Post, as payment for the joke."

The worst of it is, the man is serious.

So—will somebody please authorize me to start delivering this newspaper to his home?

For the moment, I'm a "newspaperman" in the original sense of the word. Paper, mister?

QUICKIE QUIZ DEPT.

Mrs. Salvatore Panarello, of 165 Wesmond dr., Alexandria, Va., suggests a couple of more words that often cause trouble.

The first is the correct name for the symbol "&" (ampersand) and the second is "asterisk," which a good many folks try to pronounce without the final "s."

Orthographers tell me that "kimono" is also a toughie, because too many of us substitute an "a" for that final "o." And ukulele is often misspelled because an "e" is used in place of the second "u."

But the one which invariably throws me—both in spelling and pronunciation—is the word that's commonly pronounced "sasparilla."

It's "sarsaparilla," and pronounced exactly as it's spelled, and the colloquial pronunciation isn't even listed as an alternative.

MIX IT WITH MICKS? NIX!

A few days ago "Patsy, an Irish Democrat" sent in a poem in praise of Mr. Truman. An irate compatriot named Patrick O'Shaughnessey protests:

Please don't confuse this Patsy gal
With me, whose name is Pat.
We Irish have our differences
And I'm no Democrat.
I voted straight Republican
To make the country click.
Like Patsy, I am Irish, but
THIS mick ain't quite as thick.

This looks like a peachy place for me to keep my mouth strictly shut. I'll argue politics with one Irishman, but not with two.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

I'm one of many teen-agers who ride buses to and from school. Many times, I've seen youngsters get up to give their seats to adults, but it's very seldom that adults return the courtesy by offering to hold some of the heavy books with which we're often loaded down.

I know the grownups work hard, and are usually tired. But school isn't any picnic either, and a load of books can get awful heavy.

So I say: If the adults are trying to teach us to be polite and considerate of others, why don't they teach us by example?

Joyce Marie Moore.
614 Washington ave.
Falls Church, Va.

Dear Joyce:

It's been—ahem—quite a while since I last offered to tote a young lady's books home from school.

But your point is well made and I, for one, promise to reform.

Bill.

P. S. That's the trouble with you kids. It's not enough that we teach you good manners; you expect us to have them, too. Be reasonable.

PERSONAL NOTES

Charles H. Slayman, jr., 3782 1st st. se.: Thanks for those kind words, mister.

E. S. Brenneman, Ranson, W. Va.: It seems that the only difference between the Minneapolis paper and our local press is that up there they make their typos in inch-high letters. Thanks.

To the District Liner who wrote me about the chronological discrepancy in the Mary Worth strip: I've lost your letter, but remember the gist of your complaint. Would you please send it in again, so that we can heckle the artist a bit and get his explanation? Thanks.

TURNABOUT

I'm a little stinker for doing things like this, but it did my heart good.

A police cruiser had pulled up in front of the District Building, and the policeman behind the wheel began to clamber out, to deliver a package inside.

As he eased past the steering wheel, his arm pressed down on the horn ring, and a loud blast rent the air.

As the policeman debarked, I came abreast of him and muttered:

"Better take it easy on the horn blowing, Mac—there's a drive on."

The look I got entered just below the heart and emerged a fraction of an inch from the spinal cord. But it was worth it.

Lady THAT is a definite clew

NEW YORK.—Elliott Roosevelt and Johnny Meyers, who gave conflicting testimony about each other in Washington last year, buried their differences the other night and visited the New York night clubs together . . . Meyers' employer, Howard Hughes, whose life was saved when a marine pulled him from a burning plane, is paying the marine $50 a week for life . . . Owens Illinois Glass is anxious to obtain the services of Secretary of the Interior Captain Krug and is bidding high . . . Krug, incidentally, has investments in the Los Angeles Rams, the football team, and in a textile company in the South.

A group of small-theater producers from cities throughout America asked Robert Morley, star and coauthor of "Edward, My Son," about ways of raising money for producing plays, "It's quite simple to get the money," Morley advised. "Just go to the richest man in your town and tell him 'It's the only way to fight communism.'"

Fred Keating, in advising actors to vote in presidential elections, said: "Every actor should get out of bed before 5 p. m. to vote once every four years if only for the sheer discipline of it" . . . Brynie Foy, the movie producer, is canvassing all the producers who contributed to the Dewey campaign and asking them for similar contributions, plus 10 per cent, for the Democratic Committee's deficit. "The additional 10 per cent," he tells them, "is conscience money."

President Truman may put his price-control division into the Department of Commerce, so that he can get the man he wants for the job into a post with Cabinet rank . . . Ambassador W. Averell Harriman bought at town house on East 81st st. . . . Secretary Forrestal, in discussing some of the minor difficulties in the unification of the Army, Navy and Air Force, tells of his three aides who, at their first meeting, clashed when the Army and Air Force men proposed. "Let's begin by setting up an 'S.O.P.,'" and the Navy man, whose rank was lower than the other two, objected. After long argument they learned they'd misunderstood each other: In the Navy, "S.O.P." means "Senior Officer Present," and in the Army and Air Force it means "Standard Operating Procedure."

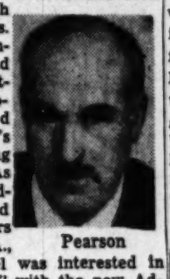
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Postelection Big-Business Blushes

By Drew Pearson

Only one group of people since November 2 have redder faces than the pollsters—the big businessmen who had feathered their nests with Dewey's friends.



Pearson

Take, for instance, the sad case of delightful Lewis Rosenstiel, head of Schenley's giant distilling company. As one of the leading whisky and wine producers in the U. S. A., Mr. Rosenstiel was interested in having an "in" with the new Administration. It was not unnatural, therefore, that he should busy himself before election in wining and dining various prospective members of the Dewey Cabinet.

Mr. Rosenstiel's motto is to leave no stone unturned. He is a successful businessman and he did not become one by accident. He believes in looking ahead. Therefore, not long before election, he looked ahead and retained Herbert Brownell, campaign manager for Mr. Dewey, as his attorney.

Looking still further ahead, he also retained as his public relations counseor Carl Byoir, a pro-Republican gentleman with pipelines into the Deweyites.

Then to make sure his position with the new Administration was secure he invited Dewey to go yachting with him right after the election to get a little post-election rest. Dewey was dated up for a vacation with Roger Strauss of American Smelting & Refining, so Rosenstiel took the next best. He invited Dewey's right-hand man, Paul Lockwood, to go yachting.

Paul accepted. Both Rosenstiel and Lockwood are entertaining gentlemen, but neither felt much like entertaining the other on that postelection trip.

Inside the Cabinet

Various Cabinet members, all set to resign, are now angling to remain. One is Secretary of Commerce Sawyer, who gave only $1000 to the Truman campaign—though one of the wealthiest men in Ohio . . . Averell Harriman, Marshall Plan Ambassador in Europe, has returned to Washington after sending an urgent cable to President Truman asking permission to discuss with him a wide range of subjects. (Friends say he wants to be Secretary of State.) . . . If Attorney General Tom Clark is elevated to the Supreme Court, the next Attorney General will be either Clark Clifford or Alex Campbell, hard-hitting head of the criminal division . . . Here's one Cabinet revision being discussed by the dopesters: Chief Justice Fred Vinson to be Secretary of State; Attorney General Tom Clark to the Supreme Court as associate justice; William O. Douglas to be Chief Justice. (Wouldn't that burn Felix Frankfurter up?) . . . Albert Greenfield, the big Philadelphia real estate man, is in line for either the Truman Cabinet or an embassy.

Another Dolly Gann Row?

Capital hostesses, who haven't enjoyed a good social row since the days of Dolly Gann and Alice Longworth's spat over who should sit where at dinner, have been glowing with anticipation over the problem of who will be Vice President Barkley's official hostess, and where she will rank at official dinners.

Vice President Barkley, like Vice President Charlie Curtis, is a widower. That was why Curtis's half-sister, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, was made his official hostess. And it was the question of whether the Vice President's sister or the wife of Speaker Longworth preceded the other at dinner which threw social Washington into such a hubbub during the Hoover Administration.

However, it looks as if Alben Barkley would disappoint the ladies. Alben is not averse to going out to dinner. In fact, he is in great demand. But he doesn't relish social rows.

Furthermore, his counterpart is also single—Speaker-to-be Sam Rayburn. Close friends, Sam and Alben have been going out together as widowers for so long that the idea of their rowing over protocol brings smiles to those who know them.

Sam was married once, so long ago that most people think he was always a bachelor. He has no official hostess and doesn't intend to have one.

Barkley, whose wife was an invalid for many years before she died, also goes to dinner on his own. Barkley says he's had a "number of applicants" for the job, but if he needs an official hostess, he will draft his daughter, gracious Mrs. Max Truitt.

Senator McClellan of Arkansas, one of the most reactionary diehards on Capitol Hill, is slated to take over Senator Ferguson's investigating committee. McClellan is sore at Truman for ousting his friend Nat Dyke from the Home Loan Bank Board and friends say the Senator is planning to smear any Government department that backs major legislation he doesn't happen to like—especially civil rights . . Phil Murray and William Green of the CIO-AFL have sent a stiff protest to President Truman against making Senator Lucas of Illinois majority leader of the Senate. (Lucas voted for the Taft-Hartley Act.) However, Lucas, an able, adroit leader, will probably get the job just the same . . . Gerald B. Winrod of Wichita, Kans., formerly indicted for sedition against his country, has been trying to buy time once a week on Washington radio stations. His agent tells station managers this is a "program I believe your station will be proud to have."
